The Charm of Carmel

By A. Carmelite
(Second Article)

There is nothing remarkable or extraordinary in the fact that men, women, yes, and even children, upon reaching Carmel, are impelled to write poetry (?). I have done it myself. I have known prosaic, steady going, inoffensive persons, who have never done this thing before, to be seized with the desire to express their delight with and appreciation of Carmel in verse. The editor of the Pine Cone informs me that he has on hand "oceans of contributed verse for future use."

And one cannot blame them. "The charm of Carmel" is upon them.

The scenic charm begins when, coming from historic and romantic Monterey toward Carmel, the summit of the hill is reached and the descent on the way to Carmel begins. Should it happen to be evening, one is almost sure to witness a wondrous sunset scene, crimson and long-lingering, and the view of this spectacle through the thousands of green-needled pines is inspiring indeed.

A short distance further down the grade and the first grand view of Carmel Bay presents itself.

On down the splendid winding highroad, within the pines on both sides at "Present arms," the traveler presently finds himself in Carmel town, a short distance only from the resting place of Padre Junipero Serra, Carmel Mission.

No wonder prose is too prosy, too unsatisfying, to express their emotions. "The charm of Carmel" is upon them, and they must sing.

In conclusion, I quote here the words of two persons, eminent in their own particular line, to impress on the reader the fact that the "charm of Carmel" is a splendid and inspiring reality.

Rev. Benj. Fay Mills, lecturing, said:

"In my opinion Carmel by-the-Sea surpasses in natural attractiveness any seashore resort in America—mountains, bluffs, woods,

Red Cross Chapter of Carmel Organized

The second meeting of the Carmel Red Cross chapter was held at the Carmel Hotel last Tuesday afternoon, the 19th.

The following officers were elected: Chairman, Mrs. E. E. Cobbe; assistant chairman, Mrs. Frances C. Pudan; Secretary, Mrs. Louis S. Slevin; Treasurer, Mrs. J. F. Devendorf.

Mrs. G. F. Beardsley and Mrs. E. E. Cobbe were appointed a committee to secure a meeting place which would be open daily.

It was moved and carried that the chapter adopt a French baby, which necessitates the payment of $3 monthly. This amount added to an equal sum given by the French government enables a mother to keep her family together.

Mrs. Cobbe, the chairman, announced that she desired to be responsible for one baby herself.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

Mabel E. Slevin, Sec.

Property of the United States Forest service, at Big Sur, was disposed of as follows last Friday: A. J. Molera purchased the house and office building; Joseph Post, the barn, and John Pfeiffer, the bridge.

dunes, beach, sand, flowers, climate."

Annie Laurie writes:

"You waken in the morning . . . and see the azure water, the snowy sand, the melancholy cypress, and all the country hazed over with the blue smoke of the wild lilac, and at their feet the leaping flame of California poppies, color, perfume, air, sky, the singing sea, the crescent of the wondrous beach, the winding roads, the enchanted fields."

Census Figures Now Completed

H. L. Warren, official census taker, appointed by the Board of Supervisors to enumerate the residents of the proposed City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, has about completed his labors and will turn in a report to the October meeting of the board showing that there is a total of approximately 540 inhabitants within the proposed boundaries.

As there is considerable question as to what constitutes residence under the law and who should be classed as inhabitants of the district, the following definition is quoted from the election laws of California:

"Every person has in law a residence. It is the place where one remains when not called elsewhere for labor or other special or temporary purpose, and to which he returns in seasons of repose. There can be only one residence. A residence cannot be lost until another is gained. The residence of the husband is the residence of the wife. The residence can be changed only by the union of act and intent."

In listing the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Mr. Warren has carefully observed the laws of the state and has been particular that the persons included in the census should be of a permanent nature.

It is not required, as many seem to think, that residents be property owners or qualified electors or legally citizens. A census, to be properly made, must include foreigners, children, and others not eligible to vote. The question whether a resident is a property owner never comes up.

The next move in the matter of incorporation is up to the Supervisors. They must call a special election within the limits of the proposed city to decide whether or not it shall incorporate. Should this election result in favor of incorporation, Carmel becomes a city of the sixth class.

If you read it in the Pine Cone, you may safely repeat it.

CURRENT EVENTS

The best evidence of the need of incorporation, and consequent improvements, is the growing increase in the attendance at our public school. Carmel's population is growing steadily.

Recently eight more elk cows, shipped from Petaluma, were liberated near Lake Majella on the Seventeen mile Drive. There has been a preponderance of bucks. The addition of the latest shipment is expected to result in a more rapid growth of the herd.

Probably O. Henry could get a "story" out of the black hat with the pathetic full-blown rose, which has been hanging in the lobby of the Carmel postoffice for several days. Who hung it there is as much of a mystery as to whom it belongs. Several have remarked "Joy-ride."

Rumor has it that next month Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Favor will move to Palo Alto. It is stated that their San Carlos avenue home has been sold to John Riley, a rider in the employ of the Pacific Improvement Co. The Favours will be missed.

Might Try It Here

The editor of Oak Leaves, published at Oak Park, Ill., has suggested to the village authorities that a sign reading as follows be placed on the street in front of every untidy vacant lot:

"This community by its schools, its police and fire protection, and its many other public benefits, is enriching the owner of this ill-kept vacant lot, the same as if it were the site of costly improvements. He might at least cut the weeds and prevent its becoming an eyesore."

The Duty of an Author

"Who, I wonder," asks Ford Madox Hueffer, "will ever realize that literature, besides being 'elevating' is a gay thing, a thing made for the increase of joy, of mirth, of happiness? It is the business of a book to be easy to be read—to be as easy to read as any book upon any given subject can possibly be. I do not mean to say that a book about the treaty of Tilsit can even be as easy for a waterside laborer or for me to read as a work about things that I or the waterside laborer know perfectly well. But it is the duty of the author to capture attention, and then to make his subject plain; there is no other duty of an author."

Presidential election takes place on November 7. If you are not on the great register thirty days before that date you cannot vote. Register now at the Pine Cone office.

CURRENT EVENTS

Some time in October, Governor Johnson, in his campaign for U. S. Senator, will address the people Monterey, Salinas and Pacific Grove. There will probably be two day meetings and a night meeting. Arrangements will be made to take a crowd of Carmelites to the Monterey meeting.

During the balance of this month and through October and November, at many places in the United States, Dr. Preston W. Search will deliver his splendid lecture "With the Painters of Pictures and Writers of Books at Carmel-by-the-Sea," before various educational institutions.

Next Tuesday, October 3, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors will receive the report of H. L. Warren, appointed to take a census in the Carmel incorporation matter. Following the adoption of the report, an election will be called, to take place on or about October 25.

Miss Ida A. Johnson has just completed a dessert set of orange and blossom design. It may be seen at the studio for a few days, prior to being sent to Syracuse, New York.

Stevenson and Corot

"In 1874 and the following year, and again later, Stevenson spent much time in the Fontainebleau region, at Barbizon, at Monastir, at Nemours, and at Cernay-la-ville. And had he challenged Corot in the woods he would have done so in French, for his tongue ran easily in the language," Everard Meynell writes in 'Corot and His Friends.'"

"They must have been rare friends, had they met, these two; Corot with his . . . loud childishness and witty simplicity, would have been a fair substitute for the beloved beggar or the contemplative vagabond. The poplars were equally gay for both, the morning as joyous, the light as queenly; and Stevenson, seeing the landscape signed all about with 'Corot' must have had the name upon his lips and in his heart. That was good enough acquaintance.

"And his descriptions seem to be written in ink of Corot tints; you are made to know whose landscape you are treading. Take his picture of Grez, and you behold a Corot. A pretty . . . village on the plain. A low bridge, with many arches choked with sedge; green fields of white and yellow lilies, poplars and willows innumerable."

"And in 'Later Essays' he writes of the pleasure it is 'to awake in Grez, to go down the green inn-garden, to find the river streaming through the bridge, and to see the dawn begin across the poplar level. . . . And of all noble sweeps of roadway, none is nobler, on a windy dusk, than the high road to Nemours between its line of talking poplars.' Connoisseurs both in roadways, these masters of prose and paint.

"Barbizon, as readers of 'The Wrecker' and some of his Essays will remember, was beloved of Stevenson. He fell into the stride of its institutions, and was sensitive for the etiquette of the forest and the inn.

"Corot was for the morning—'my specialty,' he called it. Many an artist of those days prevented the dawn with a painting parasol and a set palette, and even Stevenson rose early. 'At any hour of the morning,' wrote Stevenson, 'you could get your . . . cold milk and set forth into the forest. The doves had perhaps awakened you, fluttering into your chamber; and on the threshold of the inn you were met by the aroma of the forest. Close by were the great isles, the rocky boulders, the indeterminate field of forest shadow. There you were free to dream or wander, or, did your freedom await you at your easel, to paint.'

"There Stevenson found he was 'saturated in an atmosphere of style'—and in this he may be counted a true member of the school."

CLUB NOTES

By MISS I. A. JOHNSON

On a recent Wednesday morning, bright and beautiful, after days of fog, the members of the Boys' Club were seen wending their way to Monte Verde street, the starting point for a "hike" and picnic.

Every boy carried something; one staggered under a sack containing two large watermelons, and another had taken for the same purpose a perfectly good pillow-slip. There were numerous bundles, and even a bandbox, full of good things. There was also a fleet of small boats, made by the boys in anticipation of this trip.

When all was ready, the club and three dogs moved on to meet Mr. Lewis Josselyn, who was the leader of the "hike," and in forty minutes the eucalyptus grove and "Good Times Pool" were reached, where the leaders of the outing, who had been taken over by Mr. J. F. Devendorf in his machine, met the boys.

The club went into action at once; shoes and stockings were discarded, and the fleet set out on its perilous trip, making a pretty picture with its white sails and reflections. The two boats of the Gillett brothers, as like as their owners, bore off the palm for fine sailing. Some of the boats developed various obstreperous traits, which the boys were quick to see.

By the time the picnic leaders had emptied the bags, boxes and pillow-slips there was a more-than-hungry crowd, which did full justice to everything, and nobody snatched, not even the dogs.

The hill opposite the Bay School made a tempting toboggan slide, where the boys rolled and tumbled until weary, and, after another sailing bout, the start for home was made, all agreeing that it had been a most successful event and that the place was ideal.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Wilson are receiving their friends at Ocean Home again, having returned from a sojourn at their place in Modoc county.

Big and husky, Walter Warren arrived here last week. He has been employed in a salmon packing concern in Alaska.

Dr. Preston W. Search was here for a few days last week, prior to his departure on an Eastern lecture tour.

In the vicinity of his present residence, Mr. E. K. Fowler contemplates the erection of a dwelling and garage.

Rev. M. O. Lester and wife, who formerly resided here, were passengers on the ill-fated steamer Congress.

William Stirling, well known to many residents of Carmel Valley, died last week at Castroville, aged 81. Surviving Mr. Stirling are Mrs. B. E. Cahoon, Mrs. Chas. Witcher, John W. Stirling and Duncan Stirling, former school superintendent of this county.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Machado have been entertaining the Misses Cleaver of San Jose, who returned home Saturday.

Mrs. Marie C. Slevin has gone to Los Gatos for a brief visit with friends.

Our friend and former townsman, Birney W. Adams, came over from Morgan Hill for a week-end visit here. He reports his aunt and Floyd in good health.

Mr. and Mrs. Sage of San Francisco, who came here for a two weeks' stay, are now in the fifth week of their sojourn here. They are occupying the May bungalow.

Walter E. Anthony, who has been in the employ of the government in Oregon, is home for a vacation.

D. W. Johnson and wife and Mrs. Botsch are enjoying an automobile tour in Sonoma county.

At the recent Santa Cruz Methodist conference, Rev. S. C. Thomas was re-appointed to the pastorate of the Carmel church for another year.

Mrs. Annie Williams, who had planned to spend the entire winter here, has been recalled to Los Angeles by the continued illness of her son-in-law.

Rev. Colin Anderson of Pacific Grove will reside here for several months. He is occupying the Hopkins cottage.

The senior class of the Monterey High School has elected Eugene Gillett its vice-president. Nevera Smith is the secretary-treasurer of the new sophomore class.

Mrs. Grace Ryder is again greeting her friends here. She arrived last week for a short visit.

Mrs. R. B. Cherington, who had not been in Carmel for several months, came down last week for a few days' visit.

Rev. and Mrs. G. R. Alden, parents of Prof. R. M. Alden of Stanford, who have been spending a vacation here, will return to Palo Alto this week. Under the name of "Pansy," Mrs. Alden has written several books for boys and girls. No Sunday school library is complete without these books.

BOOKINGS

For the famous 17-Mile Drive auto trip may be made at Pine Cone off.

Rev. Stephen C. Thomas will preach the first sermon of his second years' pastorate here on Sunday morning next.

A Paramount feature films, Hazel Dawn in "Clarissa," will be shown at the Manzanita Theatre on Saturday night.
