Miss Mary E. Donnelly, sister of Arthur E. Donnelly, who frequently visited Carmel at the family home in the Paradise Park Tract, died last week in San Francisco.

The first of three publications of the municipal Delinquent Tax List will be printed in supplement form and issued with the Pine Cone of January 30.

Robert Norton will be in charge of La Playa pleasure drives here after. "Bobby" is an experienced driver, and Mrs. Signor is fortunate to secure his services.

Miss H. F. Brewer of Oakland motored into Carmel with friends a few days ago, and will occupy the Brewer cottage for a week or ten days.

Everybody is genuinely glad to see Walter Basham home again. He has been away for about eight months, during most of the time in the hospital. He is looking fine now. Never again, Walt!

"Commodore" Pardow Hooper" is here for a few weeks' stay, and expects to be joined by other members of the family this week. They will stay at one of the hotels.

Visiting friends of Garnet Holme are Lieut. Robert Waybur and wife, who are occupying the Clam-pett cottage. Lieut. Waybur of the 362nd Infantry was wounded in action in France.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Van Riper of New York are here for several months. They have taken the J. D. Gray cottage. Mrs. Van Riper was Miss Helen Ordway, visited here four years ago.

Throw away the wash-board. Buy that Electric Washer at Holman's.

The marriage of Miss Herma Rupe to Frederick E. Smith of Chicago, at present Engineer Sergeant U. S. A., is announced by cards received here. They were married in October at Kittery, Maine. Miss Rupe made many friends during her residence here.

Tickets are now on sale for the entertainment and dance to be given by the local Junior Red Cross, at Arts and Crafts Hall, on the evening of Friday, January 31.

It has been suggested that Garnet Holme put on here "The Man From Mexico," shortly before or after Easter.

Our old friend Pon Sing and his wife and children went to the city last week. Mrs. Pon may return to China.

Edward J. Sullivan, who is correspondent for a number of newspapers at Sacramento, will sojourn in Carmel during the Legislative recess. During his stay he will devote much time to his forthcoming book, "Personal Reminiscences of Theodore Roosevelt, the Great American."

The County Library at Salinas is making a collection of photographs and data regarding Monterey County's many places of historic and romantic interest. It is proposed to have colored slides made of these places. The Coast section south of Carmel and the Carmel Valley should enrich this collection.

The son born to the McDonalds in Carmel Valley the day before their death is alive and well. He is in the care of his grandmother, Mrs. H. B. Shulte.

The Carmel Audubon Society will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. F. Beardsley. Those interested are invited to attend and to join the organization.

The Misses Eliot and Marion Boke and brother Richard arrived from Los Angeles last week. Mrs. Boke and Charis will be here soon.

Mrs. Mary Falkner and her two daughters departed for San Francisco last week in time to witness the welcome to the Grizzlies. Their many friends here are hoping they will return to Carmel.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Garnet Holme returned to the city Sunday morning. His interests here will necessitate frequent trips to Carmel this spring.

From the Book Shop we learn that the first and second editions Michael Williams' of "The High Romance" have been exhausted, and that it has been necessary to print a third edition. Mr. Heron reports the book as one of his best sellers

Donations to the Armenian Relief Fund are forwarded on the 15th of each month, and should be paid to Miss Helen Parkes.

WEEKLY GREETING

To keep the cans from accumulating in your back yard; to sweep your own doorstep; to arrange your garden so that it will decorate the street; to keep the weeds from over-running the road—that is to be a good citizen.—James K. Lynch.

Perhaps It Is So

A great many people, not only here but elsewhere, marvel at Carmel's comparative freedom from the influenza. (Knock on wood).

A few days ago a gentleman, in a group discussing the subject, remarked that our immunity from a severe visitation might be attributed to the presence of the Monterey pine tree in abundance. We are constantly inhaling the healthy pitchy air, he says, which guards our lungs and throats. He suggests frequent rambles in the forest and green pine branches in the homes.

With the splendid musical talent available here an enthusiastic effort should be made to continue weekly the "community sing," so successfully launched here at the Manzanita Theatre last week.

Experiences of a Carmel "Y" Man in France

Perry Newberry Writes Interesting Account of His Work and Observations

SEVENTH LETTER

Sommauthe, France,
November 19, 1918.

I am moving westward for the first time since I came to France, and the war is over. I will stay with my outfit, men and officers of which I love, until we reach the U. S., then I'll hurry home.

We are billeted in this old French town, and I'm in a room with our Captain, Lieutenant and a Major of the Medical Corps, all the finest of men. We have a big fireplace, though we sleep on the floor. The Captain is a New York attorney, a Yale man, young. The Lieutenant is regular army, up from the ranks and remarkably able, efficient and quick of decision. The Major is a Tennessee physician, about my age, a brainy cultured man. We have pleasant evenings before the fire.

Tomorrow, probably, another step westward.

I wrote last on the day before the armistice began. I was on a hill in an old barn and an observation balloon had just been brought down. I knew then that the war was practically over, but we could not speak of it in letters. The war stopped abruptly at 11 o'clock a. m. Now that the war is over I want to get out and home as quickly as I can. So do all the volunteer officers and men. It is only the professional soldiers who are seeking place in the policing army, the army of occupation in Germany.

This town Sommauthe, has been occupied by the Germans since 1914—until the day we drove them out and across the Meuse. They never repaired it after the bombardment of 1914 and we have done more toward cleaning it up since we came in than they in four years.

Several days later. I am sitting in a back room of a modern stone house in the village of Briquenais. It is night. Before me gutter two bits of candle. My messkit, unwashed, is before me also. I own the whole house and am its only occupant. I have in one corner of this back room a little brazier in which burns a coke fire, warming it comfortably, altho there is ice strong enough to hold me up in the ditches outside. In another corner of the little room is a rough wooden box, with a leather catch, containing 26,000 francs of canteen money. A third corner holds a broken box mattress and my bedding roll; and in the fourth is the table at which I write.

Yesterday I was given my first command, a detachment of twenty men under a sergeant who has orders to take his orders from me, and was sent on a motor truck from Sommauthe to this village to pick out billets for the company, which, it was expected, would move over to day. We arrived at night and I discovered this house, a candle burning inside, and outside an old Frenchman who claimed ownership. This morning we found billets close by for the men, and I am retaining this for the officers who will arrive probably tomorrow. I'll hold on to this house and the billets until my company turns up or I get orders to move elsewhere. We can eat for a day longer at least and there are always ways to find rations.

The evicted Frenchman came back this morning to say "La maison est moi," and I admitted it was and agreed that he could have it forever after I got thru with it. I also gave him a box of cigarettes, and he went away happy.

If the war were still on and I had this same detail in an advanced position, I'd be perfectly happy. As it is, it is tame. My revolver lies on the table before me because of the money in the wooden box, but there is less danger of it being stolen than if it were in Carmel.

There are all sorts of rumors as to when we sail for New York, but no one knows anything definite and one guess is as good as another. I, being an optimist, say we will eat Xmas dinner in New York.

Dec 1, 1918—Still in the town of Briquenais in billets. I'm rooming with two captains, a major and the lieutenant. They are more than kind, having a conspiracy on to make me comfortable. Their strikers bring my mess, and they have dug me up a cot-bed to keep me off the floor. We expect to move on every day, entraining here for some point westward. I insist that we are homeward bound, but, as I have said, it's all guessing.

The days fly by. I handled a Thanksgiving supper for the Supply company and guests, and it was a success. Tomorrow the regiment entrains for a camp nearer the coast and I will travel by motor truck about a hundred miles. For the first time since I left Paris, Sept. 15, I will get back to civilization.

The work I did in Paris for the A. E. F., which I could not tell about, was in the big evacuation depot for the wounded at La Chalade. I worked thirty-six hours and helped with 2150 wounded. Was given charge of unloading the trains as they arrived. Hard work! At that time I had been assigned to deliver mail for an infantry brigade in the front line trenches. At the last minute, owing to our withdrawal to the new front, I was assigned to the 304th Field Artillery.

[Mexico, 1847.]

WE were not many—who stood
Before the iron sleet that day—

Yet many a gallant spirit would Give half his years if he then could

Have been with us at Monterey.

Now here, now there, the shot it hailed
In deadly drifts of fiery spray;
Yet not a single soldier quailed
When wounded comrades round them
wailed
Their dying shout at Monterey.

And on—still on our column kept
Through walls of flame, its withering way.

Where fell the dead, the living stepped Still charging on the guns which swept
The slippery streets of Monterey

The foe himself recoiled aghast,
When, striking where he strongest lay,
We swooped his flanking batteries past
And, braving full their murderous blast,
Stormed home the towers of Monterey.

Our banners on those turrets wave,
And there our evening bugles play
Where orange boughs above their grave
Keep green the memory of the brave
Who fought and fell at Monterey.

We are not many, we who pressed
Beside the brave who fell that day,
But who of us has not confessed
He'd rather share their warrior rest
Than not have been at Monterey?

—Charles Fenno Hoffman.

Holme and Co. Put on Good Show

"Do you know" that Garnet Holme's company of home players lived up to its advertised promise to keep the audience laughing for two hours.

"The Private Secretary" was so well done that those who saw the comedy are in good humor yet. And well they might be.

Many of those who went to the Manzanita Theatre last Thursday and Friday evenings had seen the play with eminent actors in the role of "The Private Secretary" are agreed that none of them had anything on Holme's "Rev. Robert Spaulding." Tom Reardon as "Mr. Cattermole" did the best work of his stage career. Talbert Josselyn really did make us believe that he had had a shady past, and he certainly appeared the old man in the presence of the energetic pair—Ernest Schweninger and Clarence Risley. Joe Hand, who, as the Bond Street tailor, "Mr. Gibson," had an ambition to soar with the higher-ups, did the part in his usual Jeffersonian way. Paul Stoney and Pardow Hooper made their local debut.

And the ladies of the cast. In what may be termed a "man" play, they acquitted themselves admirably. Miss Effie McLean was voluble and fluffy. Mrs. Clara Leidig was a landlady who would hearten the most impecunious lodger. "Eva" and "Edith," played by Mrs. Frances Montgomery and Miss Betty Waud, were happily betrothed as the curtain fell.

CARGO OF SUPPLIES GOES TO ARCHANGEL.

Red Cross Sends Relief Ships for Allied Soldiers and Civilians in Starving Russia.

A relief ship was recently sent from this country to Archangel by the American Red Cross with 4,000 tons of drugs, food, soap and other supplies for the use of the Allied soldiers and needy civilians in that part of Russia. The vessel's cargo was valued at $1,511,233.

Later, another ship was dispatched carrying 200 tons of similar supplies furnished by the American Red Cross, the total expenditure for the two shipments amounting to over $2,000,000.

Major C. T. Williams of Baltimore was in charge of the party of thirteen which accompanied the shipment from this country. He was formerly a member of the Red Cross Commission for Roumania. Major Kirkpatrick, at one time a member of the latter commission, but recently attached to the Army Medical Corps, heads the medical end of the Archangel expedition. Drugs and general hospital supplies constituted the greater part of the cargo sent from America.

While the chief concern of the expedition was providing comforts for American and Allied fighting men in that part of the world, all efforts were bent to get relief to the Russian soldiers who were returned from German prison camps at the rate of about 15,000 a week. The condition of these men was pitiable. It has been estimated that 90 per cent. of them were tubercular.

In addition to drugs and food, almost every imaginable article on the list of supplies sent over was for the comfort, convenience and pleasure of the Allied soldiers. Just a few of these articles were playing cards, razor blades, jewsharps, mandolins, accordions, ukaleles, phonographs, cameras, skates, wigs, whiskers, grease paints, footballs, snowshoes, slippers, hockey outfits, indoor baseballs, moving picture outfits, Bibles, prayer books, boxing gloves, games, music, books, cigarettes, candy and dried fruits.

The need of prompt relief for the inhabitants of towns along the coast of the White Sea and on the Kola peninsula, many of whom were facing starvation, was found to be imperative. Scurvy had broken out among the people at these places, adding to the general distress.

The towns to which the relief expedition was sent are virtually isolated from the outside world because of the treacherous coast line, shifting sand bars and uncharted waters. An exceptionally early frost, even for that part of the world, ruined the harvests, which were expected to improve conditions. Statements, printed in Russian, explaining the work of the Red Cross, were distributed among the inhabitants.

Replacing the Orchards.

The American Red Cross has given $10,000 to assist in the replanting of trees in the orchards laid bare by the Germans. With this sum 40,000 fruit trees will be replaced in the devastated orchards of Belgium and northern France.

Notice

ORDINANCE No. 12 and Ordinance No. 16, amending Sec. 8 of Ordinance No. 12, provides that any person owning, or having charge, care or control of any dog, who shall permit or allow same to run at large upon the streets within the corporate limits of Carmel-by-the-Sea, must have such dog registered and properly tagged; all dogs that were registered before the first day of July, 1918, must be registered at once for the year 1919.

Cost of registration and penalties for non-registration are defined in Ordinance No. 16, Sec. 8.

Hiram on the Job

In the United States Senate, Senator Hiram W. Johnson, arguing against the $100,000,000 food bill for relief in Europe, referred to the report of demonstrations in American cities in which he describes soldiers asking for food and employment. He said:

"While we are engaged in creating new nations in Europe—building air-castles over the sea—it is time to get a firmer foundation at home. I am opposed to spending this money ostensibly for starving Europe for the benefit of the packers."
