P.G. POLICE OFFICER AGAIN TARGETED FOR POLITICAL BELIEFS

■ Group to hold rally in support

By KELLY NIX

A PACIFIC Grove police officer who had been under fire for a sticker he put on his personal vehicle that some claimed was racist has been placed on paid leave after "disparaging remarks" against the Black Lives Matter movement surfaced on a social media site, while a pro-police group is planning a rally to support the officer.

Police Chief Cathy Madalone said this week that the officer, Michael Gonzalez, is on leave pending a third-party investigation into allegations he posted "disparaging remarks" against the far-left Black Lives Matter political group on conservative social media site Parler.

Social media debate

One post, according to screenshots from the site, calls BLM a "hate group," while another contains an image with an expletive before the group's name.

Asked whether there was doubt that the posts were made by Gonzalez, police spokeswoman Jocelyn Francis

Monterey County averts business shutdown

■ Hospital officials worry about staffing amid rising infections

By KELLY NIX

MONTEREY COUNTY'S three major hospitals this week reported a record number of coronavirus patients, forcing officials to hire more staff, prepare to expand facilities and consider limiting non-Covid-19-related hospital and medical procedures. But even as the county's hospitalization rate soared, the county was spared — at least for now - from having to close down businesses again, because its ICU beds are not full.

Gov. Gavin Newsom announcing stepped-up measures to curtail the coronavirus epidemic today. His latest shut-down order does not affect Monterey County - for now.

Gov. Gavin Newsom Thursday afternoon announced three-week stay-home orders for four of the state's five regions — Greater Sacramento, Northern California, San Joaquin Valley and Southern California — because ICU bed capacity in those areas has almost reached 15 percent. As soon as it falls below that level, which Newsom said could happen "as early as the next day or two," people who live in those regions will have to stay in their homes except for "essential" purposes, and more businesses will have to

"If we don't act now, our hospital system will be overwhelmed," Newsom said in a news conference. "The death rate will climb and more lives will be lost."

However, Monterey County, which has unexpectedly been lumped into the Greater Bay Area region, won't have to lock down yet. Newsom said current projections indicate the Greater Bay Area region will fall below 15 percent ICU capacity in mid-to-late December, so another stay-home order in Monterey County may yet be imposed.

Vaccine soon

The stay-home order, when it goes into effect, means bars, wineries and personal services, including hair salons and barbershops, will once again be temporarily closed, and nonessential travel is restricted. Schools with waivers, critical infrastructure, retail stores and restaurants for takeout and delivery only, will be open for business.

But Newsom was upbeat about the vaccine, which he anticipated would arrive in California as early as Dec. 12. The state is expected to receive about 327,000 doses of the Pfizer vaccine in the first round. Critical healthcare workers and long-term care residents would be inoculated first.

"We will get through this," he said. "This is the final surge. We have the light at the end of the tunnel with these vaccines, but we need to get through this moment."

While imploring people not to gather in groups,

Airbag DNA clears teen in fatal DUI wreck

■ Search now on for driver

By MARY SCHLEY

GENETIC EVIDENCE that finally arrived from a state lab last month cleared 19-year-old Carmel Valley resident Jacques Clarke in the fatal DUI crash he was arrested for nearly a year ago, Monterey County District Attorney Jeannine Pacioni announced Wednesday, and now investigators are trying to determine who's at fault for the wreck that killed 38-year-old Salinas resident Rosie Ann

On Dec. 20, 2019, at 11:30 p.m., California Highway Patrol officers responded to reports of a major collision at the corner of Davis Road and West Acacia Street in Salinas and arrived to find a crushed Mazda 6 in the road and a Toyota Camry that had smashed through a fence and overturned. Based on the evidence, officers concluded the Mazda driver had been speeding and rear-ended the car driven by Figueroa, who "died of multiple blunt force trauma within minutes of the accident." Pacioni said. "Absolutely no drugs or alcohol were found to have been in her system at the time of her death."

Passenger-side evidence

By the time officers got there, though, Clarke and another unnamed occupant of the Mazda were outside the car. No witnesses could confirm which of them had been driving, and the CHP investigators concluded Clarke had been behind the wheel, since he was the registered owner of the car, the key fob was in his pocket, and the seat was adjusted to his height, according to Pacioni. After conducting a DUI investigation that indicated Clarke was drunk, officers arrested him.

Pt. Lobos parking, shuttle planned near Crossroads

By CHRIS COUNTS

m T}$ RAFFIC CONGESTION at Point Lobos State Reserve has been among the worst in Monterey County, and to try to lessen it, California State Parks plans to build a shuttle stop, along with a 100-vehicle parking lot and restrooms, on a vacant piece of property alongside Highway 1 near the Crossroads shopping center.

The strip of land, which was once set aside for the Hatton Canyon Freeway and is now owned by California State Parks, has long been used as a staging area for the Big Sur International Marathon and is known among locals as Marathon Flats. It has also been used for yearly pumpkin patches and Christmas tree lots.

The proposed shuttle would transport visitors to Point Lobos, which is open during the pandemic — at least for now. Unfortunately, the reserve doesn't have nearly enough parking to accommodate the hordes who, before the coronavirus shutdown, regularly visited the park, which is considered by many to be the crown jewel in the state parks system.

Besides bringing visitors to Point Lobos, it's also possible the shuttle could one day service other sites farther down the coast, such as Bixby Bridge.

'Transportation hub'

Monta Potter, former CEO of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, shared news of the future shuttle hub at a Monterey County Board of Supervisors hearing Tuesday on a local plan to contend with hot spots of congestion like Bixby Bridge.

"The drawings have been completed for a parking lot and a bathroom," Potter reported. "California State Parks intends for it to be a transportation hub."

Griggs says C.V. airport will be for plants and Santa but not houses

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN A place where the mere mention of new housing can trigger a verbal brawl among friends and neighbors, longtime resident and businessman Ken Griggs may have come up with a project that will make everyone happy.

Griggs, who owns Griggs Nursery at 9220 Carmel Valley Road, told The Pine Cone Thursday he has bought all three lots that make up the former Carmel Valley Airport from the Delfino family, and he isn't planning to build even one house on the 30-acre property — a far cry from what many locals have feared.

Instead, Griggs envisions a nursery-park hybrid.

"I just want to grow plants on it," he said. "There's plenty of land there. People will still be able to walk there, and there will still be a place for a helicopter to land. I think we can work it all out."

And yes, Santa Claus will have a place to land his rein-

Embracing Bodie

HEY'D NEVER had a purse puppy, lap dog, ankle biter, little dog. They'd had cats - three of them at the time - but their dogs had always been substantial. And then one day, when they asked a dying woman how they could help her, she asked them to take her dog and her cat.

"We weren't expecting that request," their person said, "but here was this small dog and this big cat, and we just knew we couldn't say no."

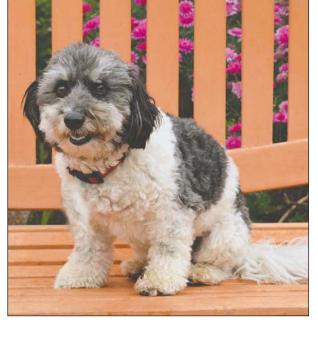

That's how a Bodie, a Shih Tzu-poodle mix, and Mash, a gray-and-white tabby, came to mid valley.

Mash didn't work out so well. She just couldn't integrate with the other cats in the household. For three years, she mostly kept to her side of the house, and they mostly kept to theirs. But when their paths crossed, the fights were epic. So, Mash went to live with the couple's son.

Bodie, the little Shih-poo, also took some time to acclimate to his new home. Used to living in a quiet house, mostly resting on someone's bed, Bodie wasn't ready for the dynamics of a large, active household. But, in time, his person said, he his personality slipped out.

"Bodie's a character," his person said. "He has lots of energy, and he's clever. He can open zippers and steal food. If the car door is open, he'll climb in to see if any snacks were left behind."

If a lunchbox is available, it's fair game.

"What we love about Bodie is he always wants to be with us, to sit on our laps, to cuddle with us," his person said. "Having never had a lap dog, we find it kind of nice."

Red Cross director to talk refugees

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

DONNA DUVIN, who ran the downtown chapter of the American Red Cross for many years, will discuss challenges faced by refugees and issues at the Mexico-U.S. border during a free online talk hosted by the group's international services department Dec. 16 from 1 to 2:30 p.m.

Duvin, executive director of the Red Cross International Rescue Committee in San Diego, has a master's degree in nonprofit management from Regis University and has spent a quarter-century focused on humanitarian work and nonprofit leadership. She's "known for her success in capacity building and collaborative approaches in addressing complex humanitarian challenges," according to organizers of the talk, which will be held via Microsoft Teams.

City's tree lighting definitely canceled

By MARY SCHLEY

No MATTER what any obsolete calendar says, the City of Carmel will not be hosting its annual tree and menorah lighting celebration this year. The lighting is usually a several-hour event that takes place the first Friday in December and includes visits with Santa in Devendorf Park, caroling by kids' choirs, dances and other performances, and ends with the mayor flipping the switch on the large tree in the median at Ocean and Junipero.

None of that gathering, playing, singing, dancing and celebrating can happen this year, of course, thanks to the coronavirus pandemic, nor can the annual open houses at Sunset Center and Carmel Plaza typically held before and after the city event.

But some haven't gotten the message, yet, so community activities director Ashlee Wright wanted to make sure everyone knows absolutely nothing will be happening in the park Friday evening.

"There has been a bit of confusion regarding the holiday tree and menorah lighting," she said. "There were a few websites that still had the ceremonies listed as taking place this Friday."

Lights-by-the-Sea

While there will be no formal lighting this year, the city is encouraging people to decorate their homes and businesses, much as they did in October. "The theme for the holiday campaign is 'Lights-by-the-Sea,' and as with the 'Pumpkins on Parade' campaign, the community activities commission is hoping that the residents and businesses will show their holiday spirit through creative decorations throughout the village."

Many homes and businesses are already sporting festive lights and decorations, including the Carmel Woman's Club, which hasn't decorated in the past but has decked out the front doors and windows of the clubhouse at San Carlos and Ninth with figures and lights this year.

Wright encouraged residents and visitors to cruise through town and enjoy the lights — but only to do so without gathering and while "adhering to all stay-at-home

P.G. neighborhood light show still set

By KELLY NIX

ALTHOUGH PACIFIC Grove's famed Candy Cane Lane might not be quite as visually dazzling this year during Christmastime — when residents deck their houses out with some of the most spectacular decorations on the Monterey Peninsula — many homeowners are refusing to let the pandemic put a damper on the holiday spirit.

The P.G. neighborhood off of Forest Avenue has drawn thousands of visitors during Halloween and Christmas for more than 60 years. The virus prevented many people from decorating during Halloween, because county and state officials discouraged trick-or-treating to prevent coronavirus transmission.

But a Candy Cane Lane homeowner and mother of two, Kate Stevens, said that while she's aware fewer residents will decorate this season, some have decided to go all out, including her family.

"We decided that because it was such a tough year, we wanted to go big, at least at our house, to make the kids happy," Stevens told The Pine Cone Wednesday.

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Jeannine Pacioni

Oct. 12 — Joseph Roy Wineman, 37, was sentenced by Judge Mark E. Hood to serve two years in the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation for driving under the influence of methamphetamine.

On June 5, 2018, at 4:51 a.m., Seaside Police Department officers were dispatched to the McDonald's at 1516 Canyon Del Rey Boulevard on a report of an explosion caused by a vehicle colliding into the restaurant. When officers arrived, they noticed a vehicle resting on its passenger side with an engine compartment that was engulfed in flames. The officers also observed that there was dark heavy smoke coming from the Mc-Donald's building itself.

A nearby witness told officers that he saw the vehicle traveling quickly and watched as it went out of control and rolled over into the building. The witness observed Wineman crawling out of the rear window of the vehicle. An occupant of Wineman's vehicle admitted that a methamphetamine pipe had been passed around earlier and that Wineman had taken part. Officers observed that Wineman was displaying symptoms of being under the influence of central nervous system stimulant and a blood test revealed that he was positive for methamphetamine on the date of the collision.

As a result of the collision, the McDonald's building had to be completely rebuilt.

Oct. 16 — Kyle Anthony Griffith, 40, a resident of Ventura County, will be sentenced to 15 years to life in prison for the murder of Nazaria Rivera Garcia.

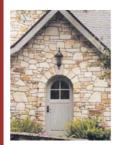

On Nov. 3, 2019, around 7:30 p.m., Griffith was driving his vehicle on Highway 198 in the westbound lane, just east of Pine Valley Road. Griffith was accompanied by his friend Jarrod Folks, 35, who was seated in the front passenger seat. At the same time, Atilano Garcia, 42, and his wife Nazaria Garcia, 35, were out for a drive on the same road, heading eastbound.

Griffith was approximately 30 yards from the Garcias' vehicle when he crossed over the double yellow lines into the eastbound lane in an attempt to pass three vehicles in front of him. Griffith's reckless maneuver caused a head-on collision with the Garcias' vehicle. The impact of the collision caused Mr. Garcia to lose control and he went off the road onto the south shoulder. Griffith's own vehicle rolled over and ended up on the north shoulder of the road.

Mrs. Garcia was declared dead at the scene due to major blunt force trauma. Mr. Garcia, who survived the collision, also suffered major blunt-force trauma, a mangled arm, numerous lacerations all over his body, and he was struggling to maintain conscious-

Full parole board hearing set for Seaside murderer of family

By MARY SCHLEY

RATHER THAN overturn a panel's decision to grant convicted murderer Howard Bicknell parole like he did last year, Gov. Gavin Newsom on Friday ordered the full parole board to decide whether the former Seaside man who slaughtered four of his family members more than 40 years ago should be released from prison, according to Luis Patiño, spokesman for the state department of corrections' parole

"The governor has decided to send the matter to the full Board of Parole Hearings" for review, he said. "The board meets – all of the 17 commissioners together once a month."

The hearing will be the latest of many for Bicknell, who was first eligible for release in 1983, five years after he was imprisoned on a sentence of seven years to life for murder, though it will be his first before the full board.

Teenage stabbing rampage

On Aug. 9, 1977, Bicknell, age 19, and his pregnant 14-year-old girlfriend went to his family's Seaside home and violently murdered four people, starting with his teenage cousin, who had told the family about his sexual relationship with the girl. Bicknell later testified that they stabbed his cousin in the throat repeatedly while holding a gag over her mouth, and then went after three other family members, including the 6-year-old girl he stabbed more than 40 times, and his grandmother.

Bicknell wasn't arrested until almost three months later, when police found him in San Diego preparing to enlist in the Navy. Following his trial and conviction, he was imprisoned in June 1978 and is serving his sentence at the California Correctional Institution in Tehachapi.

Starting with his first hearing in October 1983, Bicknell had been denied parole seven times and admitted to being unsuitable for parole three times, according to the California Department of Corrections, until the panel granted him parole in February 2019.

When the commissioners voted to release him the first time, reasons cited included a clean prison record and the fact he was 19 when he murdered 66-year-old Josephine Smith (his grandmother), 28-yearold Suzanne Harris (his aunt), and cousins 15-year-old Renee Ferguson and 6-yearold Rachel Harris. Parole commissioners also said he had suffered abuse as a child.

Newsom reversed their decision four months later because Bicknell "remained an unreasonable danger to society if released from prison."

Local DA fights it

When the panel again voted July 30 to release him, Monterey County District Attorney Jeannine Pacioni pledged to fight it. "The victims' surviving family, who are also related to Mr. Bicknell, wrote letters opposing his release, and many appeared during the hearing for the first time, now with the understanding that the person who brutally killed their loved ones could in fact be released," she said at the time. One of Bicknell's sisters said he lied about being abused and was in fact the abuser and had tried to strangle her.

Despite their "forcefully and emotionally" begging the parole commissioners to deny Bicknell's release and pointing out that serving 10 years per death was inadequate punishment, and despite Monterey County deputy district attorney Kellin Dunne's argument that his lies and denials "made it impossible to believe he no longer

Woman gets 4 years for ripping off nonprofit, schools, to buy Maserati

Lolita Garcia

By MARY SCHLEY

THE FOUNDER of a Monterey nonprofit who stole nearly $870,000 by embezzling from her own organization and overbilling public school districts — and then used it to pay for exotic cars, plastic surgery and other luxury items — was sentenced Wednesday to four years in state prison. Santa Cruz resident Lolita Garcia, 59, was taken to jail after her hearing in front of Monterey County Superior Court Judge Pamela Butler, according to Monterey County deputy district attorney Emily Hickok

Garcia established Central Coast Kids & Families, a nonprofit serving children with special needs, in 2008. The group provided inhome respite — which the state-funded San Andreas Regional Center for people with developmental disabilities paid for - and in-school aides to children with special needs at the Monterey County Office of Education and in five public school districts, including Carmel Unified and Pacific Grove Unified.

"Garcia routinely overbilled these school districts and the San Andreas center for hours that Central Coast Kids & Families' employees did not actually work," Hickok said. Through examining hundreds of invoices and timesheets for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, investigators discovered Garcia intentionally overbilled a total of $192,823.

Carmel Unified School District overpaid by a little over $5,000, while PGUSD overpaid by nearly $99,000 — significantly more than any of the other victims, which included Salinas City Elementary School District, North Monterey County School District, Greenfield School District and the San Andreas School District.

And during those same years, she also embezzled $675,646 from her nonprofit, > using the money to buy several expensive vehicles — a Porsche Carrera, a Maserati Ghibli, a Land Rover Range Rover, a Toyota Tundra and a Jeep Wrangler — as well as a diamond Rolex watch and Louis Vuitton handbags, according to the prosecutor. Garcia also spent the cash on cosmetic surgery, improvements to her rented home, clothing and apparel, dining, entertainment, travel and many other "personal luxuries."

Of course, she "failed to report the amounts embezzled for personal expenditures on her tax returns," and after becoming aware of the investigation, she formed a for-profit LLC "and purported to do business from that entity, without dissolving the nonprofit or accounting for the charitable assets that were required to be spent in furtherance of the charitable purpose," Hickok said.

Hickok told The Pine Cone Garcia's crimes came to light in 2015 after she hired a certified public accountant to prepare her charity's delinquent 990 Form, a federal tax form that all nonprofits must submit annually to account for their income and

Potter, Ferlito, Richards sworn in

By MARY SCHLEY

Outgoing councilwoman Jan Reimers attended her final meeting Thursday as the reelected Mayor Dave Potter and councilman Bobby Richards and newly elected councilwoman Karen Ferlito took their oaths of office, agreeing to "support and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California against all enemies, foreign and domestic," to "bear true faith and allegiance" to them, and to "well and faithfully discharge the duties upon which I am about to enter." The new council will preside over its first meetings next week.

Ferlito took a few minutes to comment on the challenges ahead and the opportunities that will arise "if we open our minds and remain creative and cooperative and put health and safety at the forefront."

She also encouraged residents to shop locally this season to help small businesses stay afloat.

Richards congratulated his colleagues and mentioned the others who ran for office. "I appreciate their passion and their willingness to put themselves out there," he said. "It's scary and it's tough."

He said the council has accomplished solid work over the past couple of years of which he's proud, and he looks forward to more of the same in the future.

"I was proud to be a member of the past council and am proud to be a member of this future council," he said.

Pro-tem again

Potter, who had his daughter with him for the swearing-in — which was done virtually — welcomed Ferlito and said he's looking forward to "many, many opportunities to have spirited debate and discussion," noting that "when we don't agree, we always do it professionally."

"We're blessed to have someone like Karen coming forward," he said. "Welcome to the team."

Potter then asked Richards if he would serve as mayor pro-tem again, and Richards agreed.

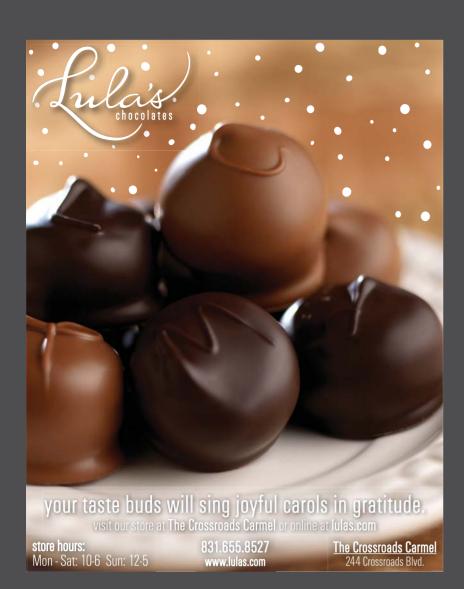

"A good leader can give direction, and a great leader can give direction and also teach," Richards said, adding that he would be honored to have the job again, and to learn more.

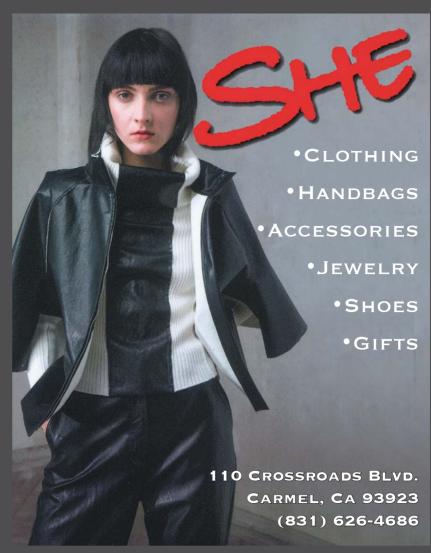

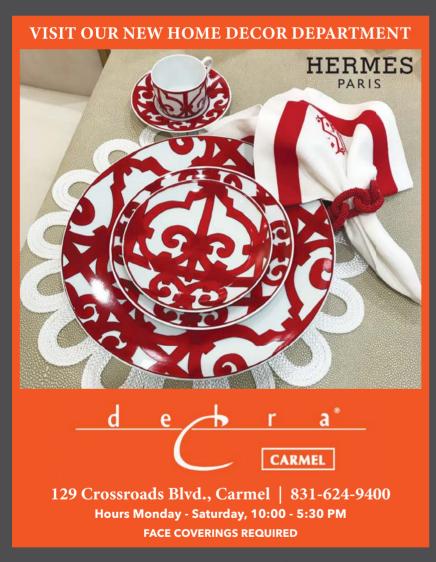

Getting sworn into office in the coronavirus era:New councilwoman Karen Ferlito (top right corner), Mayor Dave Potter (lower left corner) and councilman Bobby Richards (next to him) took the oath of office at a special meeting Thursday afternoon as their colleagues looked on – sort of. The ceremony took place online, of course, since getting together is pretty much against the rules these days.

Supe asks for help with mental health in schools

December 4, 2020

By MARY SCHLEY

The Carmel Pine Cone

SCHOOLS DO far more than teach kids reading, writing and arithmetic — they aid social and emotional development and provide stability and resources for dealing with all kinds of difficulties. But with the coronavirus pandemic forcing most students to stay home and learn remotely, many of those benefits have fallen by the wayside. Carmel Unified School District interim superintendent Trisha Dellis is asking local professionals to help.

"We're feeling a tremendous amount of concern, because we don't have our kids in school," she said, and while many children are doing fine, or even "really well" with distance learning, it's a struggle for others.

"There is a percentage of people who are having a hard time," she said. "The kids are struggling, and the parents are struggling."

And many of the mental health services the schools would typically provide can't be extended to people in their homes.

"I talk to parents, and it's really, really hard," she said. "The parents need support."

Dellis doesn't have an idea of what that help and support might look like, though. Perhaps community members who work in mental health and have a little time to spare could meet a small group of kids at the middle school or high school, or maybe they could reach out to students and parents in some other way.

"This is a really amazing community," she said. "We've talked about mental health cohorts and are trying to get the schools open, too. We want to take care of our people as much as we can, and it's just very challenging, and what we would normally be able to do just isn't happening."

She encouraged people to "be creative and try to figure out how to help," and said anyone interested can email her at tdellis@carmelunified.org.

Back-to-back council meetings next week

m T}$ HE NEWLY seated city council, with Karen Ferlito joining the others at the dais following her swearing-in Dec. 3, will hold meetings Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 7-8, to contend with end-of-year tasks and discuss pressing issues, including the budget, climate change, street vendors, and outdoor dining in the public right of way.

Monday's meeting has the consent calendar of routine business that includes an updated policy for the maintenance and retention of city records, monthly reports from department heads, the 2021 meeting calendar and a contract for North Dunes habitat restoration.

The council will also be asked to ratify appointments to several boards and commissions. Mayor Dave Potter and Mayor Pro-Tem Bobby Richards are recommending the council appoint Donna Jett to another term on the community activities commission and to bring in new commissioner Ellen Martin, to re-up Tara Twomey on the library board and appoint John Krisher to finish the term vacated by Timothy Blomgren, to reappoint Karyl Hall and Thomas Hood to the historic resources board, and to appoint Robert Delves to replace Julie Wendt on the planning commission. Because they had so many applicants for the forest and beach commission and want more time to make their selection, Potter and Richards will also ask that commissioner Al Saroyan's term be extended into next month.

In addition, the city council will honor those who helped restore the World War I Memorial Arch and hear presentations from the climate change committee run by council members Carrie Theis and Jeff Baron — who anticipate the council approving a comprehensive plan by July 2022 - and from Dale Byrne on his nonprofit, Carmel Cares, and the work it's doing for the city. Monday's meeting will wrap up with a closed session on the police officers' contract and Sunset Center Inc.'s lease of the Forest Theater.

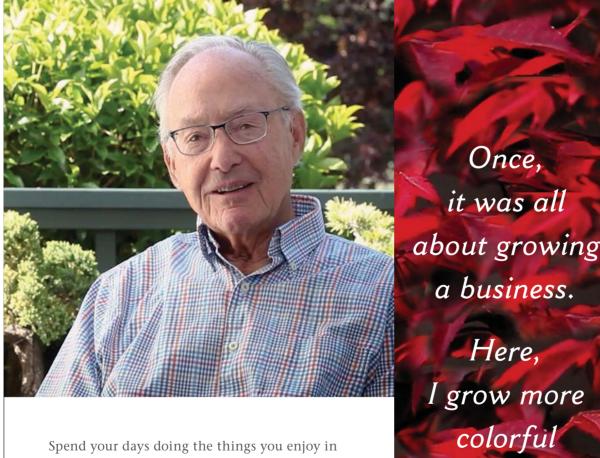

Sidewalk vending is back

On Tuesday, council members are set to consider a new ordinance incorporating the electronic filing of election finance statements and to get an update on the budget, as well as on outdoor seating in the public right of way, since that program expires at the end of the month and the end of the pandemic and return to indoor dining are nowhere in sight. Among the questions council members will tackle are whether to start charging restaurant owners for their use of public property and if all outdoor dining in town should be shut down each night at the same time, regardless of the hours of operation stated on restaurants individual operating permits.

They'll also decide what to do about sidewalk vendors which were controversial before everyone had coronavirus and major economic decline to worry about — since the temporary law governing them also expires this month.

And finally, the council will vote to increase the amount charged to hotel guests to pay for marketing and other efforts to bring more visitors to town. The updated Carmel Hospitality Improvement District ups the per-room-night charge from 1 percent to 2 percent, with the ability to increase it to a maximum of 3 percent over the next decade.

Both meetings are set to begin at 4:30 p.m. and can be watched online through the city's website at ci.carmel. ca.us. Instructions on calling in are listed on each agenda.

'The cat's climbing the Christmas tree,' and other avoidable holiday disasters

By ELAINE HESSER

m T}$ HE KIND-HEARTED people of Monterey County have continued to adopt homeless animals at a high rate this year, including more than 700 cats and 400 dogs from the SPCA alone.

For some of those families, their new friend is also their first pet, and they're up to their eyeballs with not only the joys of pet ownership, but the challenges and frustrations. They might be especially surprised to learn there are a great many dangers — all easily avoided — associated with cats and dogs at the holidays.

To begin with, the holidays require some pet-proofing, since decorations cause hazards that aren't there the rest of the year. Dr. George Bishop, the veterinarian who owns The Animal Hospital at the Crossroads, said that since pets' inclinations vary, you might want to take decorating slowly — at least to start.

Nearly every cat owner has seen the annihilation of a tree or two from a failed climbing expedition, and plants like mistletoe, holly and poinsettias can all cause problems, from irritation to death, if pets chew on them.

Hold the tinsel

Even if your pet's been around for a year or more, Bishop suggested getting a Christmas tree but leaving it undecorated for a while to gauge your buddy's reactions.

"Some will hide, some will be indifferent, and some will climb," he said. A few might even try to chew on it or eat the needles, which can upset their stomachs. Bishop said that sometimes pine needles get caught in the soft palate at the back of the mouth, which is painful. Once you know your pet's proclivities, you can decide how to move forward — which might include anchoring the Tannenbaum to the wall.

Veterinarian Dr. Kathleen Marcus of Purrfurably Cats in Monterey observed that from a kitty's-eye view, "there are so many lovely, sparkly, twinkly little things going on," and they're like feline magnets.

Marcus said the "big no-nos" for cats are tinsel, small garlands and other "linear" types of items, including yarn from that scarf you're knitting for your nephew. Once they start swallowing them, they don't stop, probably because once something's caught on the tiny barbs on their tongues, it's nearly impossible for them to spit it out. As the items leave the stomach, they can get stuck and cause the intestines to pleat like an accordion — which is as serious as it sounds.

Tainted water

Finding a piece of ribbon dangling from your cat's mouth is scary, but trying to yank it out can cause damage to the esophagus or stomach, depending how long the ribbon is. Marcus recommended calling your vet and/or taking a photo and sending it to the doctor to ask advice, if possible.

Shiny glass ornaments need to be kept where they're safe, and if your pets are prone to chewing on wires, find a way to keep them out of reach — they can cause shocks and painful mouth burns.

Marcus also said that if you've opted for a fresh tree in a stand with water, you should cover the stand. The water leaches chemicals from the tree that can irritate animals' stomachs, and many cats (and dogs) seem to love drinking out of anything but

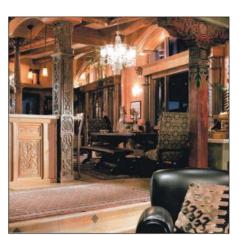

Next, no matter how soulfully your dog looks at you or how disdainfully your feline princess suddenly regards her food dish, try not to give them too much people food. Not only is a lot of it not good for

Letter to my friends from Conway of Asia: Hacienda Aguajito

I wanted to build a home that was for my family providing shelter and reflected who I am as a person. I've built several homes from a treehouse to my present home. It is a 6800 square-foot home that I began 25 years ago and will finish sometime this afternoon, or maybe another afternoon in the very near future.

The most important aspect in choosing your home is the land, of course. It was totally by chance and serendipity that in 1995 I found this land of my dreams. This is where I would build my home! It was a beautiful spot on the highest point on the Monterey peninsula. There are views of Point Lobos to the south and all of Monterey Bay to the north. I could still see the nostalgic fire tower in Carmel Valley where I built my last home where my children my children were raised. I always dreamed of finding a property in Jack's Peak.

40 years ago, I discovered this land in Jack's Peak. It is 23 acres, totally serene, and bursting with nature. The owner was a beautiful woman. It all started when she came into my store one Christmas and bought her first rug. She invited me and my young sons to see her menagerie of 220 exotic sheep. We were on our way to buy a Christmas tree but she said "go down into the canyon. There are thousands to choose from." For 15 years it became our family tradition to search out the most perfect tree in the canyon. She raised her sheep and goats for their wool which she spun into magnificent textiles. I would buy her wool to restore the oriental rugs in my store. A dollar never changed hands. She ended up with beautiful hand-woven rugs and I, in exchange, had hand-spun wool of every color that I could turn into

When she died, I got a phone call from her daughter-in-law saying they have about 20 old rugs which have your name and telephone on the back. They are bound for a dumpster unless they can be saved. Sadden by her death, I drove straight to her old home. I managed to salvage all of the rugs which were once, carefully chosen jewels. All they needed was a good cleaning. I also found her cherry wood rocking chair in which she always and sat when telling us marvelous stories about the land.

All I knew was that she was a kind person and she loved animals. But what I loved most was that she saw herself as a steward of the land that she was so connected. She told me that the Indians would hide from priests when they were forced to build to mission and all of this was this was sacred land. The old barn was actually a milking barn where those that came before her traded milk and cheese to the Italian fisherman a mile away at the wharf. There are actual ruts of the wagon wheels visible in the Carmel stone.

I asked her son what was to become of the property. He responded: "oh, no one could live here, it's so run down." I agreed with him and I asked if he would sell the land. That following morning, we were in the title company. There were no real estate agents, no lawyers, just my check for $50,000 and a handshake to bind my offer to buy the property as is. I was giddy, my heart in my throat. I had 30 days to arrange financing. We agreed that I would take over the sale of anything of value and was left with a full dumpster of memories and everything that family had left behind. I sold everything and promptly paid the family. I bought a tractor and began my vegetable garden. It was a daunting task before me. As the house was unlivable and in total neglect, I had no choice but to begin the work of salvaging what I could.

I had brought back a teepee from the Lakota Indian reservation where I attended Sundances. I lived in that teepee for two years while the land and the animals taught me to dream of how I could live in harmony with all the spirits that came before me. I built a makeshift kitchen from all the doors and windows that I could salvage. The old claw foot tub I fashioned into an outdoor bath under which I built a roaring fire and sit and soak sore muscles for hours. I gathered herbs and healing plants with lots of Tibetan salts and made a secret formula that managed to soothe body after grueling days of toil. This was quintessentially living close to the land.

It took time, but gradually I felt the animals began to accept me and I felt a deep peace. I shared the property with many a bobcat and a mountain lion. The owls called to one another as night fell. The sea lions barked and the crashing surf pierced the quiet. Then the crickets began their primordial circadian rhythms. Not to be outdone, ten thousand frogs joined in abruptly starting and stopping their serenade from the pond. This land was so alive living with animals and their beautiful symphonies. This is how the most peaceful sleep would come to call every night under the stars. I curled around the fire in the teepee after the most magnificent bath of aromatic herbs. I began to dream of the home I was going to build. My head bursting with ideas, I religiously slept with a candle and my sketchbook under my pillow

Meanwhile, at my store, with heart tumult to heart tumult, a half century of my life's work is essentially been put on an auction block. I think it is creator's way of teaching me to let go. There are treasures that are last vestiges of great civilizations that I see passing from my hand to yours. It is exciting and it is work of great joy. I talked to my grandchildren every day and tell them be patient. I will be there soon. Stay safe, wear your mask and remember, we are all in this together. We will make it through this together.

SHUTDOWN

Newsom encouraged state residents to exercise.

"We encourage to you walk your dog," he said. "We want you to exercise and go on a run with a partner from your household."

Meanwhile, three of the county's four hospitals reported record numbers of Covid patients this week.

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula Tuesday had 20 coronavirus-infected inpatients, beating a previous high of 18. Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital, with 37 patients Tuesday, and Natividad Medical Center, with 32 on Monday, also broke records.

"The number of positive cases is clearly going up at an alarming rate, and there is a significant increase in the number of patients requiring hospitalization," SVMH spokeswoman Karina Rusk told The Pine Cone Tuesday. "The escalating death toll is having a devastating impact on families and our community."

Rusk said that the hospital, because of the sheer volume of infected patients — in addition to facing the possibility of many more in the next several weeks — has implemented "more aggressive measures" to deal with the increase. It now has three Covid-19 units to treat patients, has hired back retired nurses, brought on "traveling nurses," and last weekend transferred some patients to other hospitals.

"If enough people didn't curtail their Thanksgiving holiday activities, we anticipate a surge on top of a surge," she said.

Workers infecting elderly

Officials with the Salinas hospital are considering rescheduling surgeries to relieve some of the demand on its staff. SVMH chief medical officer Dr. Allen Radner, for example, told county supervisors Tuesday, "We can't convey enough that this is real, this is serious and this is really compromising healthcare throughout the community."

Dr. Martha Blum, Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula director of infection prevention, warned the county Board of Supervisors Tuesday of "dire days" ahead, and said the number of those infected that need hospitalization will increase in the next few weeks.

"As bad as it is today and as rapidly as its increasing today, we know it's going to get worse," Blum told the supervisors.

"This infection is all over the Peninsula," Blum said. I know that a lot of people were thinking that the Peninsula was relatively protected and not quite as affected, but that is not the case anymore."

While there are more cases on the Peninsula now, the virus is still mostly concentrated in Salinas and the Salinas Valley. Blum said Community Hospital is seeing infections among family members and elderly people in their 80s and 90s who lived in assisted and skilled nursing facilities on the Peninsula, many of whom are being infected by caregivers and workers.

The hospital, Blum explained, has plans in place to accommodate patients without having to limit other services, such as elective procedures, "However, given the rate of new cases on the Peninsula, and in the county in general, it may all too soon become a hard reality that limits on certain hospital procedures will have to be considered."

While beds, medication and personal protective equipment are not in short supply at Community Hospital, officials are worried about a dearth of health care workers to

"Unfortunately, since the current surge in Covid cases is affecting all areas of the county and state, there are not many additional health care workers — nurses in particular — that can be called upon to increase our capacity," Blum said.

Natividad Medical Center CEO Gary Gray told the supervisors said the "rate of increase almost boggles the mind," but also said that staffing needed to treat coronavirus patients, not hospital capacity, is the primary concern.

'We really need the community's help to try to tamp

this down as much as possible," Gray said.

Officials with the county hospital have said it has enough capacity for patients but could be expanded by "repurposing" other areas of the hospital.

'Not quickly enough'

While Blum said the county's dozens of contact tracers are contacting a large number of people to try to stop the spread, she criticized the speed at which they are doing so.

'We don't appear to be able to reach them quickly enough to really have an effect of preventing the virus from spreading beyond tight clusters," she told the supervisors.

County health officer Dr. Ed Moreno told The Pine Cone the department is "always seeking ways to improve services," but noted that contact tracers reached 95 perccent of people within three days, data indicates.

New infections in Monterey County have risen rapidly over the past 14 days, with more than 1,000 cases last week. As of Thursday, there were 15,765 total cases and 128 fatalities, including four new deaths.

People who are currently sick with coronavirus were infected before last week, "so all that transmission and exposure that occurred because of the Thanksgiving holiday will only become apparent this week and next week," Blum said.

Moreno noted that while the county was down to about 300 cases per week in October, he noted the roughly 900 cases for the week ending Nov. 21.

"I don't see, unfortunately at this point, any leveling off of the curve," Moreno said.

While the county for months has had an expensive public relations campaign to inform residents of Covid-19 prevention measures — a contract which supervisors renewed Tuesday — physicians said it doesn't seem to be changing people's behavior to prevent the spread of the virus.

"Despite all of our messaging, it's not really giving us the desired effect in affecting people's behavior in a way that would really get this spread under the control," Blum

She said there are still many people who are still "unwilling to heed the message because they simply don't believe it," and urged more messaging and enforcement, or the "presence of knowing there may be consequences for people publicly disregarding basic safety measures."

Blum added that county residents need to "work quickly in the next few weeks to turn this around and do everything we can to change people's behaviors so we don't become overwhelmed and see more people dying."

Similarly, Radner also urged more enforcement. "Despite the great messaging, we are still having enormous problems," he told supervisors. "I think this idea of some accountability or responsibility needs to be considered a little more aggressively."

The county is preparing to receive portions of the vaccine and is awaiting direction from the state and federal government as to who will be immunized first. Healthcare workers who are exposed to Covid patients and nursing home residents are among those who would likely get vaccinated first. Moreno said that the argument could be made that farmworkers should be included in the early vaccination rounds.

Cottages of Carmel facing Covid surge

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE A physician at Community Hospital said Tuesday an increasing number of people over 80 are catching the coronavirus in skilled and assisted nursing facilities, Cottages of Carmel reported this week that it has an outbreak of new cases among its elderly residents and staff.

"Today we have eight new confirmed resident cases, which makes 16 total," wrote Alton Mendleson, the executive director of Cottages of Carmel, in a message to residents and their families.

Mendleson said all families have been notified of the outbreak. "If you did not hear from us today, then your loved one had a negative test result," he explained, referring to the facility's recent round of testing on Monday.

Also, Mendleson noted that five workers tested positive for coronavirus. None had symptoms, and all are now resting at home. So far, 10 workers have been infected, while another is isolated at home with symptoms, but hasn't been tested yet.

Another round of testing begins next week at the facili-

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

TO MAKE up for the fact that the Homecrafters' Marketplace couldn't happen this year and to urge people to patronize local small businesses, the City of Carmel has listed some of the vendors who usually set up booths during the annual craft fair on its website and has added a link to the chamber of commerce's business directory.

"While the holidays this year look vastly different than last year, it is still the season for giving. Looking for that perfect gift? Look no further than our own local businesses. Check out their online shops or visit in person," reads the introduction, before reminding people that if they do shop in person, they should adhere to all the coronavirus-related safety protocols.

"We know many of you were disappointed about the cancellation of the Homecrafters' Marketplace and we have received numerous requests to contact favorite vendors," it continues. "We have pulled together a smaller virtual Homecrafters' Marketplace."

Some of the dozens of vendors who usually appear at the craft fair to sell glass art, silk scarves, jewelry, soaps and lotions, succulents and other plants, ornaments, clothing, photos, gourd art, metalwork, toffee, woodwork, ceramics, and other gift items are listed alphabetically, with photos, brief product descriptions and necessary contact information, at ci.carmel.ca.us/post/shop-local-and-shop-homecrafters.

"I have updated the [state] Department of Health and the Department of Social Services, and they are supporting us with testing and PPE supplies at this time," Mendleson said

The facility was Covid-free until November. "We're not sure how or when" the virus arrived, Mendleson noted.

While the number of cases at Cottages of Carmel is alarming, Mendleson said his staff is holding up "remarkably well." Despite the challenges they face daily during the pandemic, he said workers remain focused on caring for those who live at the facility.

"Our care team is the most dedicated group I've worked with in my 30 years in the industry," he said. "They are putting themselves on the front line."

Martha Blum, director of infection prevention at CHOMP, said this week that medical workers are seeing more coronavirus infections among people in their 80s and 90s in nursing facilities. She said many are catching the virus from caregivers and workers.

Phyllis Atterbury Loyko 1929 – 2020

Phyllis Atterbury Loyko passed away peacefully on October 17, 2020, in Carmel, CA, ending a 7-year struggle with the effects of multiple strokes. She was strong and gave her all, right up to her last breath on her last day on earth. She leaves a tremendous hole in the lives of her family, friends and caregivers, who were with her and attended to her every need right up to the end.

Phyllis was born August 2, 1929, in Brooklyn, NY, to Barney and Bess Rosenberg. She spent her first seven years in Brooklyn living with her parents, her grandparents, Sam and Ida Heller, and her Uncle Monroe. Her father had become a partner in a coat manufacturing business. In 1936, the business burned to the ground and there was no insurance. The family moved to Los Angeles where her father started over and created Rosenberg Coats. Phyllis graduated from Fairfax High School in Los Angeles. After high school she enrolled at UCLA where she met and married her first husband, Robert Reitzes, at age 19. They had one daughter, Robin.

After Robert, Phyllis married Sheldon Steckel, with whom she had three children, Stacey, Casey and Shannon. After a short marriage to her third husband, Charles Atterbury, she suffered a life-changing fall from a horse that resulted in a broken neck. With her two youngest children still in grade school, she believed her life was over. At this point, probably the darkest period of her life, she met Lane Loyko, who helped nurse her back to health. She married Lane, and remained devoted to him for the next 46 years.

Real estate was Phyllis' passion. She started in the business in the 1950s, when it was still a man's domain. Overcoming the adversities, she succeeded, earned her broker's license, and starting Phyllis Steckel Real Estate in San Rafael. She developed clients that would buy a neglected house, live in it for a year and fix it up. Then they would sell and move on to another. She invented "flipping" before it became a common term in the real estate industry. When she saw that her clients were doing better than she was, she started buying properties for her own account and improving them. Over the years, she bought and sold property in eight states, but her favorite was always Hawaii. In 1970 she bought her first Hawaiian condo on the beach on Maui. She and her family would vacation in Maui and Lanai for the rest of her life.

Phyllis was a true leader, always inventing new ways to promote real estate sales. She was also known for hosting unique parties, where she loved to "dress to the nines." This fueled her passion for scouring the better recycle shops for the latest designer arrivals. Before her strokes she would spend two hours daily at the gym or taking walks by the ocean, often with her daughter, Shannon. She was an inspiration to many in this regard and her physical fitness served her well in surviving her strokes. Phyllis is preceded in death by her parents and first three husbands. She is survived by her husband, Lane, and by her four children, Robin Reitzes, Stacey Steckel Diaz (Steve), Casey Steckel (Danielle) and Shannon. She is also survived by six grandchildren, Amichai, Adam, Jason, Amanda, Curtis and Cameron; and three great grandchildren, Desmond, Emil and Sophia.

During the last five years of her life, Phyllis spent four years in skilled nursing facilities in Hawaii and California. Phyllis' last year was spent at home in Carmel with her husband and her two devoted caregivers, Ermelinda (Emy) Pajimola and Yanira (Yani) Pereira. They were the best caregivers anyone could ever hope for. Phyllis was so fortunate to have them, especially during the current pandemic, which has caused the nursing facilities to be locked down. Up to her last day, Emy and Yani got her up every day for meals and walks in the sun. They were amazing. Heartland Hospice attended Phyllis' nursing needs during her last year. They did a great job.

Memorial and interment services were held at Chapel of the Chimes in Oakland, California, on November 12, 2020. Donations in memory of Phyllis may be made to the National Kidney Foundation Serving Northern California, 717 Market Street, Suite 450, San Francisco, CA 94103, kidney.org/offices/nkf-serving-northern-california; the Friendship Circle of Pittsburgh, PA, 1922 Murray Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15217, fcpgh.org; the Carmel Mission Foundation, P.O. Big Sur to get more Caltrans guard rails

By CHRIS COUNTS

A MONTH after a guard rail replacement project in Big Sur drew fire for the modern look of the new rails, Caltrans this week put out word it plans to replace bridge rails at six sites down the coast.

The latest rails designated for replacement are located on bridges that cross Malpaso, Granite, Garrapata, Rocky, Bixby and Big creeks. According to Caltrans, the new rails are necessary to "meet current state and federal traffic safety standards." The agency notes that the rails on "all six bridges were given a poor rating in the [federal government's] Bridge Inventory Status Report and show various levels of deterioration."

Caltrans spokesman Colin Jones told The Pine Cone his agency has done an environmental impact report assessing

There will also be a virtual public hearing this Tuesday, Dec. 8, at 5 p.m. For a copy of the EIR, or instructions on how to watch the meeting, visit dot.ca.gov/caltrans-nearme/district-5.

EIR is needed

A public vetting is required because the bridges are considered historic. The project's name, the Big Sur Historic Bridge Rail Replacement Program, reflects the designation. All six bridges were built between 1931 and 1938. "Any time you have a historic structure, there needs to be an EIR," Jones explained.

The cost of doing the work for all six bridges is estimated at $45 million. A timetable suggests that the EIR will be done by April 2021, with the completion of the design coming in November 2022. Construction is anticipated to start in fall 2023, and be completed a year later.

Monroe (Monty) D. Reitz, was born in Hancock, Minn., to German parents whose families established their new lives in America at the turn of the century, and where Monty grew up to love farm life and the woods and wilderness of the northern plains state.

Monty's After service at the end of World War II, when he first came to California to be stationed at Fort Ord, he graduated from MSUM (Moorhead Teachers College in Minnesota) where he met and married Gladys Sheer in 1950. Their first assignment was on the Red Lake Indian Reservation, Minnesota, to teach/coach Native American students. In 1952 they moved to California, where Monty received his master's degree at UCLA. Their two daughters, Michelle Claire and Cheri Diane, were born before the couple's divorce in 1965, when they lived in San Mateo.

Monty worked in San Mateo, Belmont, Sonoma and Livermore school districts before retiring in 1990. He and his wife of 45 years, Ramona, then moved to Pacific Grove. With his Shutzhund trained German Shepherd, Vicky von der Pfalz, Monty began his avocation of Search and Rescue training and service, both in Santa Cruz County and Monterey County Sheriff's SAR Volunteer

Monty trained SAR dogs until his 905, when his long battle with cancer brought him to the end of a long and varied life, where he was known for his knowledge of government, politics, school administration and volunteerism. PUBLIC NOTICE

Notice of Draft Environmental Impact Report and Announcement of a Virtual Public Hearing

(Study Results Available)

Do you want to comment on the Big Sur Historic Bridge Rail Replacement Program on Highway 1 in Monterey County?

WHAT IS BEING PLANNED?

Caltrans has studied the effects this project may have on the environment for the Big Sur Historic Bridge Rail Replacement Program, which proposes to replace bridge rails on six historic bridges along the Big Sur Coast to bring the facilities up to current standards. The program area begins at Big Creek Bridge at post mile 28.1 and ends at Malpaso Creek Bridge at post mile 67.9. The first project will begin at Garrapata Creek Bridge at post mile 63.0.

WHY THIS PUBLIC NOTICE?

Caltrans has studied the effects this project may have on the environment. Our studies show the project will significantly affect the quality of the environment. The report that explains why is called a Draft Environmental Impact Report. This notice is to tell you that the Draft Environmental Impact Report is now available for you to read and comment on. This notice also provides information on the virtual public hearing that will be held.

The Draft Environmental Impact Report is available for review at the following locations:

- Online at: https://dot.ca.gov/caltrans-near-me/district-5/
- Caltrans District 5 Office at 50 South Higuera Street, San Luis Obispo, CA (weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.)
- The virtual public hearing on December 8, 2020 from 5:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. For information on how to join the online meeting, go to: https://dot.ca.gov/caltrans-near-me/district-5/

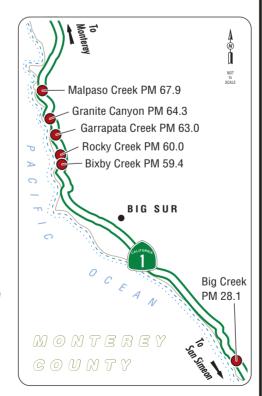

WHERE YOU COME IN

Do you have any comments about processing the project with an Environmental Impact Report? Do you disagree with the findings of our study as set forth in the Draft Environmental Impact Report? Would you care to make any other comments on the project? Please submit your comments no later than January 15, 2021 to Caltrans, Attn: Jason Wilkinson, District 5 Office at 50 Higuera Street, San Luis Obispo, CA 93401, by email to jason.wilkinson@dot.ca.gov, or contact Jason Wilkinson by phone at 805-542-4663. If there are no major comments, Caltrans will proceed with the project design.

PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD

Comments will be accepted until January 15, 2021.

If there are no major comments or requests for a hearing, Caltrans will proceed with the project's design.

CONTACT

For more information about this report or to request a copy of the Draft Environmental Impact Report, please contact Jason Wilkinson, Senior Environmental Planner, at (805) 542-4663 or by email at jason.wilkinson@dot.ca.gov. leaving decidedly unappetizing messes for you to clean up. Marcus said this is primarily a dog problem, since cats tend to be fussier about what they'll swallow.

"But I have taken some strange things out of cats," she

Too much fat can cause inflammation of the animal's pancreas, so scraping a plate with mashed potatoes, gravy and a gnawed turkey wing right into your pet's bowl is a recipe for trouble. Bishop said in some cases, it can lead to painful pancreatitis. Also, poultry bones can splinter and cause serious internal problems.

If you're a lover of onions and garlic (and their many relatives), frequently found in stuffing, green bean casseroles and the like, you should know they're toxic to dogs

A box of chocolates might have been nice for Forrest Gump, but the theobromine in the sweets can cause stomach upset, seizures or even kill dogs. Lids and wrappers mean nothing to a pet, so put away any goodies when you go to bed or leave the house.

Disrupted routines

While one or two bites of people food may not be problematic, it isn't funny to slip the family pet some beer or wine. Not only are grapes and raisins toxic to dogs, but neither cats' nor canines' digestive systems can process alcohol.

When those cute little faces become irresistible, Bishop suggested having a dish or two of pet treats right at the table so you can indulge them safely.

Marcus said that cats thrive on routine, and too many changes can bring on stress cystitis — a urinary tract issue that causes the animal to strain to pee. She said an overthe-counter remedy called Zylkene, derived from milk, seems to be helpful in keeping them calm.

She said she also sees more flea problems after the holidays, which she suspects have been caused by visits from people and other animals — something that should be significantly less frequent this year.

Finally, if you're giving the gift of a forever family to an animal this season, go with a gift certificate tucked into a box, maybe with a symbolic stuffed toy — and bring your new pet home later. Holiday chaos can overwhelm an animal that's already trying to adapt to new surroundings. You also want to make sure the newcomer is everybody's first choice.

DNA

But as part of the investigation, in January, the CHP sent the Mazda's passenger-side airbag to the Department of Justice for DNA analysis, since Clarke's DNA wouldn't be on it if he had been driving. Ten months later, on Nov. 9, the state lab returned the results, which indicated that Clarke's DNA was in fact on the airbag.

To be dismissed Friday

And with the proof he wasn't driving, he can't be charged with being drunk behind the wheel and causing the accident that killed Figueroa. Based on the DNA results, Pacioni announced Wednesday that her office will dismiss the charges against Clarke on Dec. 4 in Monterey County Superior Court Judge Andrew Liu's courtroom.

And now, she pledged, investigators will try to determine who was at fault. "The district attorney's office is committed to bringing justice to the family of Rosie Ann Figueroa and is actively investigating this case," she said. "Any member of the public who has information regarding this case is encouraged to contact district attorney investigator Leonardo Gomez at (831) 755-5000."

When asked if the other occupant of the car is now the suspect, Pacioni told The Pine Cone, "We are not able to provide that information at this time.

Fire district collects toys for Kinship Center

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE MONTEREY County Regional Fire District, which includes stations in mid-valley, Carmel Valley Village and at the intersection of Highway 68 and Laureles Grade, is gathering toys for the kids at the Kinship Center. The nonprofit provides adoption and foster care services, supports relative caregivers who have taken over for parents, and offers mental health services for children.

The center has canceled its annual Family Ties holiday party, making toy delivery to the children and families it serves even more important.

Fire Capt. Justin Reyes, who is organizing the drive, observed that while coronavirus-related restrictions are making the effort more "logistically challenging," the department's commitment to children in foster care remains strong. Reyes and his colleagues chose the Kinship Center as a recipient because it's located in the district on River Road and is an agency that helps others. He said he hopes the partnership continues well into the future.

Red toy drop-off bins are located outside at the Toro, Chualar, Laureles, East Garrison, Village and Mid Valley fire stations, and donations will be accepted until Dec. 24.

deer when he visits Carmel Valley in the post-Covid era. "We don't want to be the ones that stopped Santa's Fly-In," Griggs said. First responders will also be able to access the land, which has long been used as a staging area during emergencies.

'We care'

The businessman said he believes there's enough water for him to grow his plants, many of which are drought-tolerant. He plans to "start out slow," and add more plants over time. "There's some really good wells on the property, and they're not in the Carmel River aquifer," he noted. "That's a good thing."

Griggs conceded he has long contemplated buying the property, but hesitated due to controversy surrounding it. The Pine Cone has reported on two plans to develop it in recent decades — and both faced opposition. But recently, after consulting with many residents, the businessman decided to move forward with the deal.

Now he's hopeful he can create something that will make everyone happy — however elusive such a scenario

"We care about the community, and we want to do right by it," he added. "We want to make the property beautiful."

Griggs said he paid $925,000 each for two of the three parcels that made up the former airport. He said it's too early to divulge the price of the last lot.

A Carmel Valley local since he was 12, Griggs purchased the nursery that bears his name from his father in 2006. The site was once home to a nursery known as Begonia Gardens.

Never took flight

The airport was built by Byington Ford, who imagined a neighborhood where residents flew small planes to work. But the timing of the venture's grand opening — on Dec. 7, 1941 — couldn't have been worse.

Ford's dream never came to fruition, but the airport endured. The Delfino family bought it in 1953. The Monterey County Board of Supervisors attempted to close the airport in 2000, but a petition drive ended that threat, and the same year, the site was deemed a state historical resource. But two years later, it officially closed.

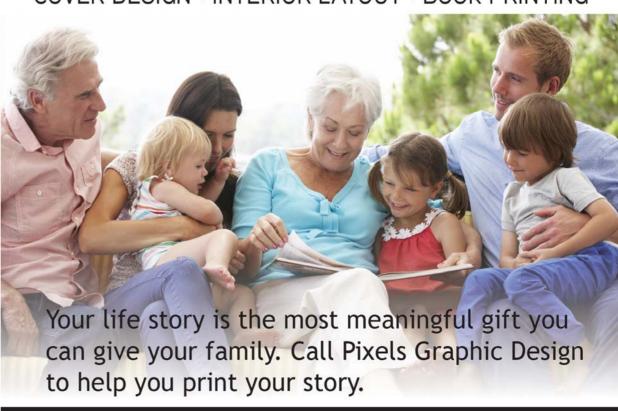

Two years ago, Supervisor Mary Adams backed a push to buy the land, and asked for the county's help. A group called Carmel Valley SOS (Save Our Open Space) was formed. But the effort never got off the ground.

Hitting the bullseye with tears

YOU ALMOST had to feel sorry for Gov. Gavin Newsom as he made his announcement this afternoon about the latest shutdown orders.

Newsom is a man who always tries to present himself as supremely confident about his worthiness to possess the enormous powers of his office, and about his ability to lead the state through its coronavirus crisis.

But he also has to be aware that he (and his experts) don't really know that much about how the virus spreads or why the illness it causes varies so much from person to person. From the very beginning, they've been making — at best — educated guesses about how to proceed, not only with fighting the virus, but with managing the economic havoc it's causing.

As we've said before, the improvisational nature of Newsom's management of the epidemic was understandable in the early days. But as the summer wore on, the public had every reason to expect him and his advisors to start to understand what they were doing, and sure enough, in August, Newsom seemed utterly certain about the wisdom behind his Blueprint for a Safer Economy, which put all of us on a very specific system of tiered shutdowns — from Purple (the most restrictive), to Yellow (the least) based on county-by-county infection and hospitalization rates. It was a system that was supposed to remain in place indefinitely as it guided us all safely to the eventual end of the virus.

But when cases started to zoom up in early November, Newsom bailed out of that system like a fancy restaurant on fire and switched to a "Purple Tier for everybody" scenario which, he assured us, would bring the post-Halloween surge under control.

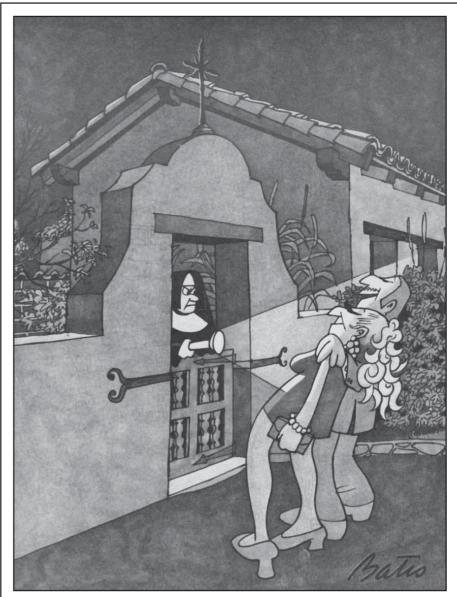

And now that's out the window, too. Why? Because the earlier strategies did not work — and that means that either staying at home, or wearing masks, or whatever, were in and of themselves ineffective strategies, or the governor and his compatriots were afraid to crack down on places where people weren't following the mandates.

Which brings us to the weirdest thing about today's shutdown orders and their purported basis in ICU capacity. After months of being told that the borders of Monterey County were inviolate places as far as coronavirus restrictions were concerned, and that hell itself would have to freeze over before local businesses would be allowed to open by zip codes, all of a sudden we're no longer a political unit unto ourselves. Now we're part of the Greater Bay Area Region and, no matter what happens here, we'll be confined to our homes if coronavirus cases continue to surge in places like Santa Clara, San Mateo, San Francisco and Alameda counties — all of which, we might add, were as recently as a month ago under much looser coronavirus restrictions than we've been under throughout.

If you're starting to feel confused and helpless, join the club. The only way to find any virtue in what the governor does would be to believe that every shutdown is good as long as it's tougher than the one that came before, and that fighting the virus is quite literally the only thing that matters.

But if you think protecting people's jobs and livelihoods is also important, the only thing you can feel is helpless frustration. Over and over again today, Newsom said he cared, but the emotion seemed fake. He even teared up a bit, but the tears, it seemed, were of the crocodile variety.

Letters to the Editor

Face shields not enough Dear Editor,

I grew up on the Monterey Peninsula and love returning every chance I get — especially during Covid, when I have enjoyed walking the beaches and visit the shops. I am especially happy about Carmel's strict mask wearing rule and $100 fine. I really think that helps keep businesses going and protects everyone.

I have been very surprised, however,during the two short visits I've made to see store merchants wearing only clear shields with no masks. There seems to be a misconception that the shields do the same work as the mask. They do not. Covid is an airborne disease. Respiratory droplets from coughing, sneezing, or talking travel through the air and can easily get behind the shield infecting the wearer.

Health care workers wear masks and shields for extra protection. The shield alone does noth-ing. Please let people know so that everyone can continue enjoying Carmel and businesses can stay open.

Importance of volunteers Dear Editor,

As the storm season approaches, the role of our Carmel Community Emergency Response Team volunteers has become even more important to residents and vis-

Last July you printed an article about Carmel CERT. Thank you. The article was a call to action to present our team and encourage new membership. The following week more than 25 Carmel residents reached out to us to secure more information on how they could participate in support of our community. We are pleased to report that as a result of the article we graduated 16 new CERT members Nov. 14 with more on a waiting list for future programs.

This new addition of team members now brings our total to 35 Carmel and area residents trained and motivated to support our Carmel Police and Fire Departments along with our Carmel citizens and visitors. This training program was made possible by a collaboration of wonderful folks who worked very hard behind the scenes to make this a reality. With the support of Chief Tomasi, Officer Rachelle Lightfoot and generous donations from Carmel Gives and Carmel CERT members this program was able to become a reality.

This new training culminates a busy Summer and Fall for our existing team members. To date Carmel CERT has volunteered in excess of 700 hours in supporting Carmel PD, Monterey Fire and surrounding communities through emergency response, training programs, urban search, and support of coronavirus protection initiatives.

We are hoping to run a new class in the Spring of 2021. If anyone would like to get on the waiting list, please contact Rachelle Lightfoot at Carmel Police Department, myself at info@peaceofmindpreparedness. com, or Scot Smythe at scot@smytheglobal.com

FATHER ANDRES de la Asumpción, a Carmelite padre who arrived on our shores with the expedition of Sebastian Vizcaino, gets credit for holding the first Catholic Mass on the shores of Monterey Bay on Dec. 17, 1602.

After that auspicious date, there was no further European activity in the area until the arrival of Father Junipero Serra and Gov. Gaspar de Portola in 1770. The founding of the Monterey area as the capital of Spanish Alta California began with

Serra leading a Mass on June 3, 1770 and provisional governor and Serra as president of the missions. Fages and Serra tried to put together a plan for colonizing additional territory, but their relationship was challenging.

Serra and the other padres traveling with him went over the hill and established a new home for the church. Near the Carmel River they found fertile ground for growing fruits and grains and set up the initial mission. In 1771, they completed a wooden chapel within a small compound that included quarters for the padres and a few soldiers. The padres, with assistance from native converts, soon added storerooms and housing for the native workers. Prominent among the early padres who joined Serra at Carmel were Juan Crespi and Francisco Palou.

To help speed the settlement of Alta California, Capt. Juan Bautista de Anza led an expedition of 240 colonists, including 155 women and children. They left Mexico in September 1775 with plans to settle near San Francisco Bay. They arrived at Monterey in March 1776, and a third of them stayed rather than continuing with de Anza.

Crespi died in 1782 and, after Serra died in 1784, Palou briefly was in charge at the mission until the arrival in 1785 of Father Fermin Francisco Lasuen. Before his assignment to Carmel as president of the missions, Lasuen had been assigned to Baja California in 1768 and San Diego in 1773. Under Lasuen, master mason Manuel Ruiz came to Monterey in 1791. Ruiz designed and built both the Royal Presidio Chapel in Monterey and the stone church

A lifetime of serendipity and art

By DENNIS TAYLOR

IF ANYTHING about the artistic, poetic, adventurous life of Heidi McGurrin seems incomplete, it might be that F. Scott Fitzgerald didn't live long enough to write about her.

Where to begin?

She was born in San Francisco 18 days after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, during an air raid blackout on Christmas Day of 1941. Her father, Howard McGurrin, was vice president of Coldwell Banker.

Her mother, Elizabeth Ulman McGurrin

Pell, was a third-generation Californian, great-granddaughter of Albert Gallatin, who built the Victorian governor's mansion in Sacramento, and grandniece of weaving and poetry. From kindergarten through the eighth grade, she was educated at Miss Burke's School, an elite, independent girls' academy in San Francisco's Sea Cliff neighborhood. But she had trouble coloring between the lines.

"I was always in trouble, always being punished," remembered McGurrin, whose parents shipped her off to Virginia as a high school freshman, to Foxcroft School, a famous boarding academy.

'I was always in trouble'

Mugged in Bolivia

The California girl didn't mesh well with her "snooty" East Coast classmates, nor did she embrace discipline that included military-style marching, supervised by U.S. Marine drill sergeants. McGurrin's less-than-perfect housekeeping habits earned demerits - lots of them - which resulted in more marching.

A perk was Foxcroft's spectacular stable of horses, which she learned to ride through open fields, and jump over stone walls during steeplechases and fox hunts. The school also had a top-drawer art de-

And she found diversity. She befriended a group of Cuban-born girls who told her stories of turmoil, tragedy and strife on their island, where a revolution was progressing.

McGurrin's friendship with her Cuban classmates contributed to a lifelong affection for Spanish-speaking people throughout the Western Hemisphere. At 21, she traveled from San Francisco to Chile to attend a wedding, and, much to her parents' dismay, decided she didn't want to come home. She and a Scottish acquaintance continued on to Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Peru, and Bolivia, where they were mugged on a mountain road by masked which brought me back to San Francisco. I wound up in Children's Hospital, where they had never seen anybody like me. My skin was green and my side was hurting so bad that I could barely walk."

The moment she felt better, McGurrin fled her family's stuffy expectations and restrictions and showed up at Nepenthe, where Aunt Lolly warmly welcomed her with a comfortable couch next to the fireplace, a view of the Big Sur Coast, plenty of great food, and a job at the restaurant.

Her aunt helped her move into a house on Anderson Creek whose previous occupants had included Henry Miller and an artistic cousin, Kaffe, whose paintings still decorated the walls. It had a huge vegetable garden, and French windows that let in the ocean breezes while she painted.

The house also was within walking distance of the Esalen Institute, where she found a job.

"Eventually, I needed the city again — I needed the music," said McGurrin, who returned to San Francisco. "My sister, Flicka, and I lived together on the top floor of a wonderful house on Vallejo Street, with jazz pouring out of our windows all the time. I'd sneak out to North Beach whenever I could. That's when I discovered the back side of the city, where all the new jazz was being born."

She fell hard for a jazz drummer Arthur Lewis — "a Negro musician," according to the San Francisco Chronicle — at a backstreet club called Soulville, and they eloped to Mexico in May 1965. She was 23. They returned and rented two back rooms in the former Russian Embassy building (by then a "rundown rooming house," said the Chronicle). where Janis Joplin, Tom Wolfe and Led Zeppelin had lived. Her charcoal portrait of Arthur was taped over a broken window to block the fog and wind.

Magical parties

Her parents were not happy. "I don't know if it's true. I just don't know," her father told the Chronicle. "If it's true, it's an awful shock."

Arthur fathered her first two children. Thyme Lewis (Carmel High, Class of '84) became a popular Hollywood actor, portraying Jonah Carver on the TV soap, "Days of Our Lives." His sister, Winona (CHS '85), is a salon owner in Mill Valley. McGurrin's youngest, Alistair Monroe (CHS '88), is an Oakland-based music producer and investor in jazz musicians the son of Arthur Monroe, a celebrated artist and longtime registrar of the Oakland Museum whose paintings soon will be displayed at the Smithsonian.

The marriage to Lewis didn't last, and McGurrin returned to Big Sur as a single mom, living in a cliffside home near Coast Gallery, with an outdoor bathtub surrounded by hanging passion vines and jasmine. When a mudslide wiped out the mountainside (including Coast Gallery), she spent time at the Partington Ridge home of Jaime de Angulo, a famous linguist, novelist, ethnomusicologist, medical doctor, and cowboy (rumored to ride naked through Big Sur on his horse). "We'd have weekend parties with drums, music, dancing, children, animals ... it was magical," she said. She also built a home in Big Sur but opted to relocate to Carmel Highlands when her children became school age.

McGurrin and her second husband, Arthur Monroe, later lived for a year-and a-half in Santiago, Chile, where he had an art studio, but that marriage also was short-lived. "I was a wild child, and I always was attracted to wild men," she said without lament. Monroe traveled on to Bahia, in Northern Brazil, and into the Amazon, studying old Amazon societies. She came home to the Monterey Peninsula.

When McGurrin's children grew up, she embarked on her next adventure, traveling to Southern Baja, Mexico, as a photographer, writer and Spanish-speaking translator with The Flying Doctors, who flew tiny Cessna aircraft to remote areas, bringing dentistry and eye care to people who had never seen doctors before.

In subsequent years, the Seaside resident has focused on her animals (horses, cats, and 13-week-old Schnauzer puppy named Phoenix).

She also thrives on her artwork, often commissioned paintings.

In 1998, Congressman Sam Farr helped set up a showcase in Washington D.C. for the photographs McGurrin captured as a credentialed journalist in Cuba, which were published in her 2011 book, "Havana Dream." She also took a memorable photo excursion to Haiti. Her photos have been exhibited at multiple galleries and museums.

Images of McGurrin's colorful impressionistic and abstract paintings and some of her poetry can be found online at Heidi-mcgurrin.squarespace.com.

HISTORY

in Carmel.

An interesting aside is that when Col. Harold Mack built his estate in 1927 (now the campus of Santa Catalina school), he claimed that on his 50-acre site he found the quarry from which Ruiz quarried the stone. Mack used the stone from the same quarry to build his hacienda.

For the first century of European expansion in California, the Catholic church held sway. As foreign immigrants of the Protestant persuasion joined the Spanish community, they adopted the Catholic church as their new faith. This became necessary in order for them to marry the Spanish señoritas, which in turn allowed them to acquire land.

Two key examples are William Hartnell of Lancashire, England, and Capt. Rogers Cooper, who was born on Alderney, an island in English Channel, and raised in Boston. Hartnell arrived in Monterey in 1822 at the age of 24. He was baptized at the mission on Oct. 13, 1824, and six months later married Maria Teresa de la Guerra, the daughter of Don Jose de le Guerra y Noriega, a prominent and wealthy resident of Santa Barbara.

Fading influence

Cooper sailed into Monterey harbor in 1823 and became both a friend and competitor of Hartnell. Cooper was baptized at the church in 1827 and married Encarnacion Vallejo, the younger sister of Mariano Vallejo. That future general was serving as personal secretary of Gov. Arguello who took charge at Monterey after Mexican independence from Spain.

When Cooper invited his half-brother, Thomas Larkin, to join him in 1833, Larkin, without becoming Catholic, developed a strong mercantile business, married a Yankee woman, and built a very nice home in Monterey. Under Mexican rule, the church lands were secularized and while the Catholic church remained a constant presence, its control over the population faded.

Mexico's President Farias, a puppet of General Santa Anna, appointed Jose Maria Padres as the new governor in 1834. With Jose Maria Hijar, Padres led a group of 239 Mexican colonists, mostly craftsman, to populate the lands taken from the church and to replenish Mexico's national population in Alta California. Before they reached Monterey, Santa Anna took charge of the presidency and stripped Padres of all authority. Nevertheless, the influx of Mexican colonists helped grow the Mexican Catholic population in Monterey. Only the church in Monterey continued. The Carmel mission was abandoned and its buildings deteriorated over the next several decades.

Vice on the Sabbath

A dozen years after the arrival of the new crop of colonists from Mexico, Commodore Sloat landed at Monterey in July 1846 and claimed the territory under orders from President James Polk — a leading proponent of the doctrine of Manifest Destiny, which held that the United States was destined to extend from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific. Accompanying Sloat was the ship's chaplain, Walter Colton, who was set ashore to serve as the civil authority during the occupation. As long as the ship remained in the harbor, he provided Protestant services, often joined by some of the residents of Monterey.

While priests continued to hold services at the Catholic church, attendance apparently decreased in the waning years of the Mexican period at Monterey. Colton's diary entry of Sunday, Aug. 9, 1846, recorded, "There was no service in the Roman Catholic Church, owing to the absence of one of the priests and the infirmities of the other. But when there is service, only a few of the people attend." His October entries lamented of the Sabbath, "there is little here to remind one of its sacredness. More liquors are retailed on this day than any other three" and "gambling is a vice which shows itself here more on the Sabbath than any other day of the week."

As for the Protestant presence in Monterey, and all of California, Colton wrote on Nov. 8, 1846, "there is not, except myself, a Protestant clergyman in California. If the tide of emigration continues, there will be thousands here without a spiritual teacher." Colton clearly contemplated holding services in Monterey, but never did.

The first land-based Protestant service in Monterey would not take place until after the arrival of a Presbyterian missionary in December 1848. Next week, we will address the growth of the Protestant Church on the Monterey Peninsula in the late 19th century.

Candy Cane Lane residents have been decorating the Pacific Grove neighborhood since 1957.

As established by city officials earlier this year, the curfew does not apply to gatherings that involve exercising First Amendment rights. It also does not restrict people who have to be out for work or tending to other essential business, and members of the same household can still ride in a car together during those hours. They can also pick up takeout at restaurants where the kitchens remain open after 10 p.m. but can't dine there and can't socialize with others while they wait.

That decision triggered a 120-day review period in which the state board of parole hearings worked to determine whether the decision complies with the law, "there is no error of fact and there is no new information that would likely result in a different decision," Patiño explained. "This portion of the review process takes about 90 days. Grants of parole suitability that pass the board's review are referred to the governor for a 30-day review."

On Nov. 27, a few days before the Nov. 30 deadline, Newsom referred the inmate's parole grant for review by the full board.

ness when officers arrived. Griffith's passenger, Mr. Folks, suffered a dislocated hip and lacerations to his face and arm. Griffith's own injuries consisted of a broken toe on his left foot, lacerations to his face and arms, and a bruised chest.

At 10:38 p.m., Griffith submitted to a blood draw that showed he had been driving with a blood alcohol level of over .14 percent. In California, a person who drives a vehicle with a blood alcohol level of .08 percent or above is presumed to be driving while impaired by alcohol.

In an interview, Griffith told officers that he drank more alcoholic drinks before driving that night than he could remember. Griffith also admitted that in the year-and-a-half preceding the collision, he had driven a few times when he had been intoxicated to the point that he could not remember how he got home. Griffith told officers that he drove that night despite knowing that driving under the influence of alcohol is extremely dangerous to human life.

At the time of the collision, the defendant was on misdemeanor DUI probation from a 2014 conviction that included a condition to that he abstain from alcohol consumption. Griffith had also suffered a prior misdemeanor DUI conviction in 2012

Under California Law, an individual who drives while impaired by drugs or alcohol and who kills someone can be charged with murder if that person intentionally drives under the influence while knowing it is dangerous to human life and does so with conscious disregard of that danger.

told The Pine Cone, "this will be addressed and determined in the course of the investigation." Police Chief Cathy Madalone suggested the department had already determined the officer was responsible for the posts, however.

"I urge you not to let the actions of one [officer] affect the relationships the city has built between the department, the community, and the rest of the women and men of the Pacific Grove Police Department, who work tirelessly to keep the community safe," Madalone said in a statement

First Amendment

While the comments attributed to the officer appear to fall within his constitutionally guaranteed right to free speech, they could run afoul of his terms of employment, and police did not immediately indicate whether they believed that was the case

But city attorney David Laredo said, "Based on facts and evidence, the outcome may lead to disciplinary action or no action."

The City of Pacific Grove's employee handbook contains more than four pages about the use of social media, but the section applies mainly to city-run sites. The city allows personal use of social media and says employees should "maintain professional conduct and use common sense" while using such platforms.

The posts — whoever made them — are directed at the Black Lives Matter group, not Black people.

The page also makes fun of President-elect Joe Biden and Sen. Mitt Romney, and advocates for the release of Kyle Rittenhouse, the Wisconsin teenager who fatally shot two men after they attacked him.

A group of residents have urged the city to fire Gonzalez. Their calls were amplified this week after the surfacing of the social media posts — even before confirmation was available that Gonzalez was responsible for them.

"As residents, employees, visitors, and taxpayers in the City of Pacific Grove, we deserve to feel safe and protected," stated an online campaign to get Gonzalez fired that was started by P.G. resident Randy Fairgarden. "We will not be policed by anti-government militia."

Last summer, Gonzalez, who is Hispanic, was investigated for putting a sticker for the right-wing California Three Percenters group on his truck. Gonzalez also had decals perceived to be insensitive to LGBT individuals, but removed them and apologized after he learned some citizens were offended, according to the police department.

However, the city determined Gonzalez did not violate any policy or law, and the case was closed. It also determined he was not a member of a militia.

A member of the California Three Percenters, Keith Alden, emailed The Pine Cone this week, pushing back on claims the group is "racist and anti-government."

"I am of Hispanic and Filipino descent, along with other minorities in our group, and we are far from racist," wrote Alden, who said the group supports patriotism.

'Big heart'

Several of Gonzalez's friends this week came to his defense. Lyle Skeen, who met the officer a few months ago, called him "a great human being" with a "huge heart for others." Two other friends shared similar sentiments but did not want to go on the record.

"People are trying to paint him as this racist and homophobic person, but he truly isn't." Skeen told The Pine Cone.

Skeen recalled the day he met Gonzalez at a pro-President Donald Trump rally. When an organizer of the event told Skeen, who is gay, not to carry his rainbow flag while being interviewed, Gonzalez made a point of telling Skeen he was more than welcome at the rally.

"We even had conversations about Officer Gonzalez's life and how he was raised by a Black man from 13 to 18 years old after his biological dad passed away," Skeen said.

Skeen said they share a dislike of the Black Lives Matter group.

"How could you support an organization that supports burning and looting and defunding police departments, and burning them down?" Skeen said. "All defunding the police would do is make crime rise."

In 2017, Gonzalez was named the city's Police Officer Of the Year for his "dedication, professionalism and excellent service delivery." He helped save two kayakers — whom Skeen said were Black — off the coast of Lovers Point that year.

Rally in support

Skeen is organizing a rally on Dec. 13 from noon to 3 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Police Department to support police, Gonzalez and "freedom of speech and expression."

While PGPD has not publicly named Gonzalez, Skeen identified him in an advertisement for the rally on a social media page.

"We denounce the request to terminate Officer Gonzalez," the ad says. "End the attacks from councilwoman Jenny McAdams, Randy Fairgarden and Zoe Shoates."

He also started a petition on change. org to "end this modern day witch hunt" against Gonzalez.

Skeen urged McAdams to sit down with Gonzalez and "get to know him before judging him based on stickers and social media posts that don't align with her beliefs."

After the first investigation into Gonzalez, McAdams — who claims systemic racism is "everywhere" in Pacific Grove, and who in October referred to a Pine Cone reporter as an "ignorant white man" — proposed the city council pass an "equity and empowerment initiative."

The council Wednesday night OK'd some aspects of the proposal and directed McAdams to return within 120 days with more detail, Mayor Bill Peake said.

Potter is working on the shuttle stop at Marathon Flats as a part-time project manager for a nonprofit called "Park It," which seeks to use shuttles to relieve some of the traffic that has plagued Big Sur and the Monterey Peninsula in recent years. She said the first step in establishing the transportation hub will be demonstrating that it can do the job. There are plans to launch a pilot program next summer.

"We've got to prove it will work," she said. "It will be a trial run."

It should come as no surprise that there's no money for the project — at least for now.

"We need to get funding to get started," Potter explained.

But once it's up and running, the idea is that the shuttle will fund itself.

"It won't be free," she observed. "People will pay for it."

Potter is hopeful the shuttle stop will come to fruition. "We see it as model for the future," she said.

Top local state parks official Brent Marshall described the reserve as "wildly popular," and he said he's hopeful a shuttle can be a successful part of efforts to reduce traffic there. "We're excited to look at the big picture, and see what we can do to alleviate parking concerns at Point Lobos."

The parking lot was designed by Whitson Engineers of Monterey. Once funding is secured, the project will need a coastal development permit and will face a planning process that could take six to eight months, Potter added.

'Stop jumping on the baby,' and other things football moms say

THERE WERE no fragile vases decorating Patty Johnston's home when her boys were growing up. No ornate knick knacks. Not even a houseplant. What was the point, when the air was constantly filled with flying ob-

Her husband, Craig, had been a legendary quarterback in high school and college — enshrined in the athletic hall of fame at both schools — and Patty had blessed him with three rambunctious sons. Her firstborn, Pat, grew up to be a quarterback, like his dad, breaking multiple passing records as a three-year starter at Carmel High, where his father had become the head coach.

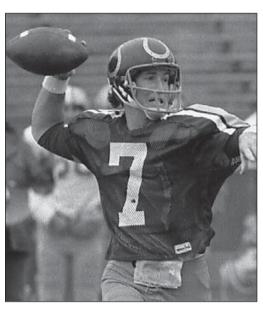

Her youngest, Kenny, shattered most of Pat's records a few years later. Phil, the middle son, grew into a sticky-fingered wide receiver who caught passes from both brothers (and became even better on defense). Together they amassed 14,626 yards for the Padres through the air, and all three played NCAA Division I college football at their father's alma mater, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo.

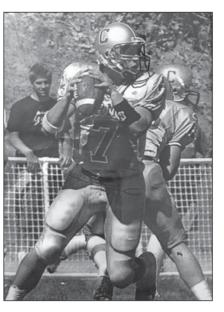

"They were all over each other, like puppies, all the time," Patty said. "When Kenny was tiny, his brothers would be diving on him, rolling all over him, and I'd be yelling, 'Stop jumping on the baby!' And I'm not going to say Craig made it worse, but he certainly didn't help. He had them running pass patterns through the house, down the hallways, into our living room, diving onto the couch to catch his passes."

Bitten by the football bug

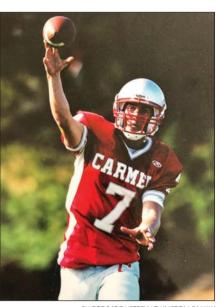

Big brother Pat, now 34 and preparing for his seventh season as head football coach at San Luis Obispo High, corroborates his mom's complaints: "No ball in the house ... that was never a rule where we lived," said the married

Pat Johnston, Class of '04, was second-team school all-state at Carmel High. Phil Johnston, CHS class of '06, led the county in receiving as a junior, and was even better on defense. Ken Johnston, Class of '09 at CHS, broke most of his brother's high school passing records.

father of three.

Craig Johnston played on the No. 1-ranked high school football team in the nation in 1976, starting at quarterback for the St. Paul Swordsmen, a team that won California's 4A Southern Section title at the L.A. Coliseum. That summer, he played at the Rose Bowl in the Shrine High School All-Star Game.

He went on to play quarterback at Cal Poly, where he was a two-time team captain, taking the Mustangs to the national playoffs as a sophomore in 1978, then leading the team to the NCAA Division II crown in his senior year, 1980, beating Eastern Illinois, 21-13, in the championship game at the University of New Mexico. He was the first quarterback in school history to throw for more than 2,000 yards in a season, and still ranks sixth all-time in passing at Cal Poly with 3,987 yards.

Patty, who had only recently transferred from San Jose State to Cal Poly, caught her first glimpse of Craig Johnston, the quarterback, when her dad alerted her that her new school was on TV, playing for the national title. She bumped into Craig occasionally when she got to the campus, they became friends by the time he graduated and left to coach at Northern Arizona, and they got friendlier when he returned. They were married in 1985, and Pat and Phil were born in San Luis Obispo in 1986 and '88. Ken came along in 1991, after the family had moved to Carmel, where Craig began teaching physical education and weight training, and coaching the Padres.

Childhood dreams

Craig confesses without hesitance that he was dreaming about raising quarterbacks and receivers when his boys were still in the womb, although he deliberately avoided coaching them in any sport until they became old enough to play high school football.

But the bug bit. College and NFL football games were always on TV at the Johnston home, with Dad sharing his observations and the boys drinking it all in.

"We'd go to Lake Tahoe during the summer and they'd play football in the sand," Patty reminisced. "They'd deliberately throw passes that were just out of reach so they'd have to dive into the water to make the catch. Those were fun times."

Pat and Ken developed strong arms and

Duo becomes quartet, strategizes release of album Winery offers art new

THE DUO Lillie Lemon has added two members to become a quartet with the name Kinder Creatures, and the new group has just released the second music video from its upcoming album, "Lycanthropy."

Like earlier albums under the former name, the new one goes down the synth-pop road, but with a dark and surprising twist — the album draws its lyrical inspiration from the hysteria over werewolves in Europe in the 15th century, and offers an alternate take on the mythical creatures. For instance, the album imagines a world where the werewolves are all women. "What if werewolves were real, and not what we think they are?" suggested singer Lillie Lemon, who told The Pine Cone the lyrics tell a coming-of-age story, too.

San Francisco Bay area rock band Mother Hips performed a set at Big Sur's Henry Miller Library in September – and this Saturday at 8 p.m., the library will stream the concert online.

With live shows off-limits for now, Lemon and her bandmates — keyboardist Wobbles, guitarist Zachary Garren and drummer Darrin Thomas — have been focusing their creative energy on recording. The new album is ready to be released, but the members are still contemplating the most efficient way to reach their audience.

"The album's been finished," Lemon told The Pine Cone. "We're just trying to figure out a game plan in the time of Covid. How do we put something out now? A lot of our album sales came from shows. We're still trying to work it out."

Music camp at home

The band has also kept busy by participating remotely in a songwriting camp in Wisconsin. The camp was started by Grammy Award-winning songwriter Pat MacDonald, who wrote and sang the Top 40 hit, "The Future's So Bright, I Gotta Wear Shades," for Timbuk 3.

Lemon said part of the focus at this year's camp was on video production, which she said is not only an essential tool for a songwriter in the coronavirus era but adds a "really cool new layer of creativity" to making music.

Kinder Creatures took a song they wrote last year at the camp, "What About Us," turned it into a video, and entered it in a national contest. Singer and local DJ Hanif Wondir joined them for a recording and shoot, and the video was released in April. NPR included it in a widely heard program on top contest entries that debuted in July.

For now, the band plans to release two more music

But what if someone wants a warming cocktail before dinner and doesn't like coffee? A few local spots have come up with new ways to keep their customers comfortable and toasty.

"Hot drinks are particularly appeal-with the company that owns La Playa and Hotel Carmel. "Hot cocktails warm you up from the inside out."

Bud's, the bar and restaurant in La Playa Hotel at Camino Real and Eighth, and Brophy's Tavern, the pub at Hotel Carmel at San Carlos and Fourth, each have new hot drinks on the cocktail menu.

"One of our customers gave us a recipe for the best hot buttered rum I have ever tasted, so we are putting it on the menu," Crowe said. In addition, bartenders James Garvin at Bud's and Xavier Plascencia at Brophy's "both make an outstanding Irish coffee, and we are putting the final touches a hot toddy that features tequila, lemon and honey."

Teddy Press, it's reminiscent of a Hot Toddy (whiskey, lemon, honey, and spices like cinnamon and clove) but more refined, with the smoother, more complex characteristics of the cognac showing through. It's a bit spendy, though, at $59.

For its hot coffee drinks, 7D lists the Affogato Espresso Martini (Absolut Vanilla vodka, crème de cacao and a shot of espresso over vanilla ice cream) and Boozy Hot Coffee spiked with Grand Marnier, brandy and Kahlua, and topped with whipped cream.

The Seventh & Dolores Steakhouse is open from 3 p.m. for social hour and then dinner Thursday through Monday, and for brunch on the weekends from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Go to 7dsteakhouse. com for more information.

Nancy Tran, food and beverage manager at the Cypress Inn a block away at Lincoln and Seventh, said that while the bar is closed for indoor use, guests can still order hot (or cold) cocktails to enjoy in the outdoor heated patio. In addition to the Hot Toddies, Bailey's and Irish coffees and other "generic hot cocktails," she said, Terry's Lounge offers an adult Chai Tea Latte that includes chai-infused vanilla vodka. The only traditional hot drink not offered at the moment his hot buttered rum.

Amaro every day

Over the hill in Pacific Grove, Francis Verrall, the lead bartender at Mezzaluna Pasteria, likes to serve many of the restaurant's impressive selection of amaros hot. An Italian herbal liqueur dating back to Roman times, amaro walks a line between sweet and bitter and comes in a wide range of flavors and styles, from low-alcohol and fruity, to higher proof and intensely herbal.

"Every amaro has its own unique flavor profile," he said. "When hot water is added, it brings out the botanicals and highlights the aromatics — we like to serve ours in a tempered mug with a twist."

The restaurant has nearly three dozen different amaros and is also celebrating them with an "amaro Advent calendar" featuring a different amaro cocktail each day. Click on the calendar at mezzalinapasteria. com to see the day's selection, and visit the website for information, reservations, and to order takeout, too. Mezzaluna is located at 1188 Forest Ave. and can also be reached by calling (831) 372-5325.

■ Keep an eye out for Village Gem

Judith Lalor is taking over the former Il Grillo space on Mission north of Fifth, with plans to open a new restaurant called the Village Gem. The city approved Lalor's business license application two weeks ago, but she said it's too early to talk about her plans for the restaurant and when it will open.

In her application, Lalor, who has a business in Monterey called Grace Gardens Inc., described herself as "a well-seasoned server, bartender and restaurateur who started her career at the Trafford Hall Hotel in Manchester, England, in 1985." She went on to open a 1940s-themed jazz and supper club in New York City's theater district in 1997 and ran it for 15 years, and then established a restaurant in Chicago that recently celebrated its 6th anniversary.

Lalor moved to Monterey this year to join her new husband, Kirt, and said she plans to "be hands on and present in the daily running of all operations" at the Village Gem.

As many who apply for new restaurant permits do, Lalor said her cuisine will include only "fresh ingredients responsibly sourced from the ocean and from farm to table." She said she plans to feature "uniquely regional cuisine with 'wows' of seasonal specials," afternoon tea with English trifle and "a hearty roast dinner for the family on Sundays."

The sample menu lists a charcuterie and cheese board, smoked salmon platter, a couple of salads, shrimp cocktail, Oysters Rockefeller, seafood stew, mussels, salmon filet, ribeye steak, roasted half chicken, spareribs, risotto and pasta, and she said the wine list will feature local and international selections, as well as craft beers.

■ Shopping at Folktale

'Pivoting' seems to be one of 2020's featured words, with practically everyone with a business or other enterprise figuring out how to pivot during the pandemic in order to survive, and in November, Folktale Winery in Carmel Valley quietly opened a shop, Folktale Provisions, to draw more customers.

Curated by creative director Daniel Scheffler, the "retail gallery" carries "modern objects of craft and artistry for home, kitchen and the enhancement of tale's lead chef and culinary czar, Todd Fisher, such as seasonal jams, infused oils and balsamic vinegars, and preserved lemons, and the health conscious might be particularly interested in a line of "botanical beverages and healing soups" by Organic

Scheffler pointed out the items in the shop can't be found in catalogs, and each has a special and interesting story written by him. "I wanted to create a real reason to come into the space," he said, because the retail experience should provide some sort of escape and magic.

"So, I decided to work with artisans that do one-offs for us and change it up all the time, giving people a reason to come, hang out, sip and shop, and really learn new things," he said. "I want to remind people of 'styling their life' and create an atmosphere where you can come do exactly that."

Scheffler has the shop open weekends when the winery is welcoming visitors for outdoor tastings but arranges private shopping appointments the rest of the time, an experience he promises is not only coronavirus appropriate, but much more fun. "And we all need some jollification when we can have it," he said.

Appointments are available Monday through Thursday, and the shop is open Friday through Sunday alongside the winery at 8940 Carmel Valley Road. Find more information at folktaleprovisions.com.

■ Family meals and wreaths

The MEarth habitat project can't host classes and events in person, so the nonprofit is offering virtual sessions focusing on cooking and holiday decorating.

'We want to celebrate with you bring and some warmth to your holiday season by offering two fun and interactive virtual workshops the whole family can get involved in," organizers said.

On Sunday, Dec. 6, from 3 to 4:30 p.m., Tiffany Chung, MEarth's "stewardship educator and culinary enthusiast," will lead a Winter Family Meal Workshop focusing on Pozole Verde, a vegetarian rendition of the traditional, hearty and warming Mexican soup. For a suggested donation of $30 (or whatever the participant can afford), the workshop can be watched live via Zoom.

And on Dec. 8, Lolo, owner of Burst+Bloom florist in the Crossroads, will show how to create beautiful holiday garlands using found and local materials. The DIY Holiday Garland Workshop will run from 3 to 4 p.m. and will be offered for a suggested donation of $20.

fler is settled into a home in Carmel Valley — he is looking forward to the return of travel in the post-coronavirus world so he can spice up the shop's inventory, which will specialize in what he calls "high-end boutique homeware," with an emphasis on unique or customized items.

"I plan to travel the world and shop for the store, and work with artists and artisans," Scheffler told The Pine Cone

A native of South Africa who now lives in San Francisco, Harper draws her inspiration from nature. "My work is primarily concerned with my ties to this country and the harsh, enduring beauty of its landscapes, particularly the Atlantic coastline," Harper explained. "I am fascinated by landscape as sites of collective memory, loss and renewal."

Scheffler and Harper have been friends since child-hood. "She is magically talented, and all her work feels equally Cape Town and California to me," he said. "She has always lived between these two places, and I now see it through her eyes."

Also from South Africa and now a resident of Edinborough, Scotland, Freemantle is a painter who employs ink, graphite and oil stick on paper. "He's the most cerebral artist I know," Scheffler said.

It's no surprise that two of the first three artists featured in the shop come from South Africa — Scheffler was born there, too. "I wanted to bring something from home," he said.

Bender, who lives in Brooklyn, is a painter, sculptor and street artist. His work, which is influenced by his focus on yoga and meditation, seeks to explore "the layers of reason, randomness and logic that make up each of our consciousnesses."

The shop is open Friday, Saturday and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m., and by appointment.

■ $$ needed for art scholarships

Concerned that local students-artists aren't getting the resources they need to stay creative and engaged during the pandemic, Open Ground Studios is ramping up its efforts to help by unveiling a scholarship program.

"Students everywhere are struggling to maintain focus and to rise above the internal and external stress and anxiety created by these extraordinarily difficult times," executive director Denese Sanders said. "We are witnessing daily the toll this national crisis is having on the young adults in our community."

Because many students-artists lack the space to pursue their art at home, the program will give scholarship recipients a place to create at Open Ground Studios, along with materials and mentorship with professional artists. But financial support is needed to make the program possible.

Sanders sent along a message from a student-artist to illustrate what many young people here face — and how much effort they will go through — to make art during the pandemic.

"I currently make art in my bed, on the ground of my room or just on a chair in my room," wrote Melanie, who's in her first year at Cal State Monterey Bay. "This can satisfy my art production, but it's not the best since I share a room with five siblings, and one of them sleeps on a small mattress on the ground, so the hours to work on the floor can be cut short. I also get back pain from drawing on my lap and leaning down when working off the ground."

The deadline for submitting scholarehsip applications is Dec. 6. For more details, visit opengroundstudios.com.

■ You decide who wins

There's still time to vote for the People's Choice winner in the Center for Photographic Art's 2020 International Juried Exhibition. The display is up through Dec. 20.

"The artist with the most votes at the end of the exhibition will receive a monetary prize and a special award," executive director Ann Jastrab said.

Located at San Carlos and Ninth, the center received nearly 2,500 entries for this year's show, including 119 finalists. Forty-nine of those images are on display at the downtown gallery.

pinpoint accuracy. Phil, the receiver, became an expert at running precise patterns, eluding defenders, and catching everything he could reach.

They also excelled at other sports as kids, and were multi-sport jocks at Carmel High. Pat played outfield on the Padres' MTAL championship baseball team as a senior, leading the team with eight doubles, ranking among team leaders with three home runs and 20 RBI.

Phil was All-MTAL in basketball as a senior, when he also was chosen as the league's Defensive Player of the Year. He averaged 10 points a game (second on the team) as a 6-foot forward.

But the two older brothers acknowledge that Ken was the best athlete. "He was taller, he was faster, and he was better-looking than us," Pat summarized.

Just dad

Little brother quickly returns the credit. "My brothers always set the bar high for me," said Ken, 29, a firefighter for the City of San Luis Obispo. "As a player, you're always looking at the guys who came before you — the numbers they put up, how many wins they got — and you want to be better than they were. They taught me a lot, and they gave me a lot to reach for."

Like Phil, Ken played basketball, earning all-league plaudits as a 6-1 guard in his junior year, then All-MTAL and Defensive Player of the Year as a senior, when he also led the team in scoring with a 12-point average.

Their dad (whose childhood buddy was his cousin, future major leaguer Jamie Quirk), also had been a multisport athlete, playing football, basketball, and baseball, but his sons say they knew very little about their father's on-field heroics growing up. To them, he was just Dad.

"He's always been so humble about it," said Phil (Class of '06), who was hired this year at Carmel High to teach P.E. and weight training — the job his father held until he retired last year. "I was a freshman in college when we went to Dad's hall of fame induction at St. Paul High School, and people kept walking up to me saying, 'You have no idea what a good athlete your father was, and also what a good person he was."

How many passing yards did Craig Johnston accrue for the nation's top-ranked high school football game? "Oh, I have no idea," he said with a dismissive shrug. "I don't think it was all that many. It was a different era.'

Likewise, their mother (a P.E. specialist for the Monterey County Office of Education for more than 20 years) was content to stand in the shadows and watch their sons shine, but was an integral part of Carmel's football program for 17 years.

"She was basically the team mom ... or, more accurately, she was like the team mom to the team mom," her husband said. "We'd have team breakfasts in our backyard on Saturdays, before every home game, and Patty was the chef. Every Friday night, when I'd be heading out the door to scout a game, she'd be getting everything ready for the next morning — boiling potatoes, or whatever."

Time of his life

Fifty hungry people would show up the following morning, gobble the food, walk through the plays on the lawn, then gather in the living room to watch whatever college football game was on the tube until it was time to go.

And that's when the real fun would begin, particularly when the brothers finally were old enough to play for their

"I had always heard horror stories about fathers who had tried to coach their sons, but my kids made it easy," Craig said. "All three of my sons worked hard, set a good example, and they were good people, and I just feel extremely fortunate that they felt comfortable enough to play for me. Those years were the best time I ever had in my

■ Mandolinist unveils holiday LP

It's doubtful any local musician has kept busier during the pandemic than mandolinist David Holodiloff, who's figured out a slew of creative ways to keep playing. On Sunday, he releases "Enchanted Winter II," an eclectic collection of acoustic holiday

Kinder Creatures just released the second single and video from its upcoming album, "Lycanthropy." The Monterey-based synth-pop quartet has found creative ways to stay busy during Covid.

"The record, 'Enchanted Winter I' came out nine years, and I wanted to give it a facelift," the mandolinist said. "I have a totally different band now. There are new arrangements, and we've done some of the songs in different styles — it's a very lush sound.

Besides Holodiloff, the lineup includes fiddlers Elijjah McCullar and Peter Mellinger, and pianist Michael Martinez. The music, meanwhile, includes holiday favorites like "Jingle Bells" and "Silent Night," along with reimagined classics like "Jah to the World" and "Got Rest You Funky Gentlemen."

The record also offers a tribute to guitarist Django Reinhardt. "If Django ever played a Christmas Carol, it might sound something like this," Holodiloff added.

You can open your mouth to sing, just don't let any sound come out

THE AUTHOR, Joseph Heller, manifestly captured the absurdity of daily military life in his novel, "Catch-22." I received a taste of that absurdity when as a 17-year old I joined the Army Reserves. I attended meetings in the basement of a drab building in downtown Buffalo, N.Y. The meetings began with a brief lecture. Following the lecture we would adjourn to another room to play poker. In the summer we spent two weeks at Camp Drum near Lake Ontario. I was designated company clerk because I could type, thus I was in the command post one day when, after reviewing our unit, a regular army colonel asked our commander how long it would take to reach combat readiness.

Three weeks, sir," the commander told him.

"I think more like three years," the colonel said.

'A singing nation'

The protagonist of Heller's novel, John Yossarian, has one goal, "to stay alive even if he dies trying." He tells the company psychiatrist he is crazy, hoping to be grounded so he won't have to fly any more highly dangerous bombing missions. But he's told making such a claim proves that he's fit to keep flying.

"Let me see if I've got this straight," Yossarian says. "In order to be grounded, I've got to be crazy. And I must be crazy to keep flying. But if I ask to be grounded, that means I'm not crazy anymore, and I have to keep flying."

That's Catch-22.

The same principle plays a role in the current pandemic. Our vaunted leaders have told many people that, in order to save their lives, they have to destroy their livelihoods. Yet, the people prescribing this drastic therapy continue to get a regular paycheck.

Several of the decrees descending from Mt. Sacramento are irrational. Among the more absurd is that singing is forbidden at gatherings, even in church. Can't sing? When I was growing up I sang along with the rest of a singing nation. At the movies, all of a sudden the lights came up and the words to a song appeared on the screen with the notation "follow the bouncing ball." A ball landed on every note to teach the audience how the song went. Many of the songs were patriotic tunes, such as "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again," and "Over There." And guess what? We sat there and sang because group singing was an American tradition going back to the 19th century. We sang around pianos, and around campfires. We sang in dormitories, on car trips, bus trips, at church socials and impromptu gatherings of friends and neighbors.

My mother taught me all the old songs while we sat on our front porch on balmy summer evenings. "Carolina in the Morning" and "Shine on Harvest Moon (for me and my gal)," were part of our songbook, as was:

"You are my sunshine, my only sunshine. You make me happy when skies are gray.

You'll never know dear, how much I love you, Please don't take my sunshine away."

All together now

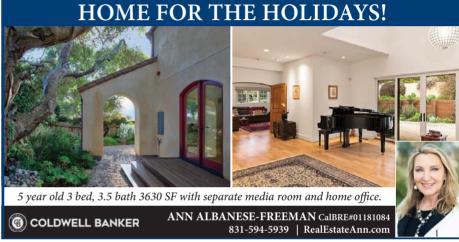

In the early 1960s, NBC launched the first "Sing Along with Mitch," television show. Mitch Miller was a graduate of the Eastman School of Music and a classically trained oboist. Author William Zinnser writes in his book, "The Writer Who Stayed," "Miller became a record producer for Mercury Records and Columbia Records. He was a genius at packaging singers in catchy arrangements that would propel any of them to fame." Among them were Rosemary Clooney, Tony Bennett, Johnny Mathis, Patti Page, and Frankie Layne. "He thereby shaped America's taste in popular song after World War II, before rock blew all the old conventions away," Zinnser writes.

"Sing Along with Mitch" was a hit for more than three years. Miller used songs that were in a range that people could handle. They were easy to remember because they were built on the first phrase, as in, "There are smiles that make you happy, there are smiles that make you blue,"

We knew the songs because we grew up with them. The melodies were inside of us. Miller ran the lyrics as captions across the bottom of the screen. And we sang. In our living rooms, in saloons, American Legion Halls, and anywhere folks gathered around a TV set. We sang everything from "Avalon," to "Tzena, Tzena, Tzena."

One of the songs, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," had its own choreography. Zinnser describes it this way: "As the song begins, everyone puts his arm around the person sitting on either side and starts to sway with the music. Sure enough, when the first notes were struck, as if turned by a switch, arms were deployed throughout the auditorium and the audience rocked gently to the lilt of the waltz."

We are living in the movie "Catch-2020." Bureaucrats hit a switch and turned off our lives, while they enjoy life without the same restrictions they force upon us
